NNCC signs 140, but classes dropped

Elko Daily Times

Accounting and business software are "in," ham radio is "out." That's the word from Northern Nevada Community College Coordinator Peggy Hogan.

NNCC started classes Monday, with 140 signed up to take them.

"We have had a good turnout for classes," Hogan said.

Hogan said the classes with the most students were Accounting 1 with 17; Business Software with 15 students and a new class for the college, Beginning Guitar, with 14 students.

"These classes are pretty much filled to capacity," she said.

However, the college had to drop several classes due to a lack of registrations, including the new Amateur Radio Class.

"I was disappointed not to see that one go over," Hogan said.

Other classes dropped included Equipment Troubleshooting for Ranchers, Mothers' First Aid and European Civilization.

"If we didn't have ten students register for the class we had to drop it," Hogan said. She added, "We did have some classes for the one-year certificate the college offers that we kept even though they didn't make the ten student minimum."

The community college is an extension of NNCC's main campus in Elko. It offers White Pine residents more than 45 classes to choose from and allows them to work towards a one-year certificate in two fields, Hogan said.

The Elko college also has extension colleges in several Nevada communities, including Ely, Winnemucca and Wells. Classes taken in the extensions can be applied towards a two-year degree if students transfer to Elko.

Hogan said she plans a couple of field trips for students at the college. The first would be a trip to the Ramses II exhibit currently displayed at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah. She said she would also like to take students to the Hansen Planetarium in Salt Lake City to see the starshow on Halley's Comet. The Ramses field trip would probably take place in May and the Hansen Planetarium trip sometime before that, she said.

The college is scheduled to hold registrations for an alternate semester sometime in February. The alternate semester runs shorter than the current semester, which goes until May. She said the alternate semester offers self-paced classes and teacher certification programs.

A class in computer-assisted instruction has drawn a lot of calls, Hogan said. Callers seem to fear that they will be left alone with the computers without much instruction, she said.

"It is true that students are pretty much self-paced in the class," Hogan said. "However, there are several instructors qualified in math, science and computer languages to aid the student during the courses."

Classes at the college run 15 weeks and are held at White Pine High School and Ely Grade School during the evening.

Registration today, Friday

Northern Nevada Community College officials reported a good turnout of students showed up to register for the spring semester this morning. The NNCC library will be open until 8:30 tonight and from 8 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. tomorrow for registration.

One of the college's unusual offerings this semester is a course in handwriting analysis. Through the study of strokes, slants and pressures, students will be taught to pick up approximately 100 personality traits of the writer, according to instructor Dorothy St. John Jackson.

Jackson is a member of the International Graphoanalysis Society and writes an internationally distributed column on handwriting analysis. The class will be taught on Thursday evenings, beginning Jan. 30, for 12 weeks.

A late registration period, for those unable to register today or tomorrow, will end Jan. 24 at the college.

Registration under way

Registration at Northern Nevada Community College is under way and two art classes by Elko newcomer Keven Heaney will be among the many offerings. Registration continues today until 8 p.m. and tomorrow from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Sarah Campey of NNCC said Heaney will teach classes in pottery and stained glass. Heaney's main areas of interest are in oil painting, pottery, drawing and watercolor, Campey explained.

The ceramics class will be held from 7 to 10 p.m. on Tuesdays and will cover hand-built and wheel-thrown pottery and glazing. The stained glass classes will be held on Monday evenings and will deal with the foil method of construction.

Heaney moves to Elko from Montana to take the position of Elko Junior High art instructor, Campey said.

Instruction at NNCC will begin next Tuesday. EDPF August 28, 85

Grandmothers enjoy taking NNCC classes

By Coty Raposa-Floyd

When registration lines form at Northern Nevada Community College Thursday and Friday, scattered among the blue-jeaned young adults is another group of student who are growing in number.

They are grandmothers...going to college.

They are women of Elko County who believe growing older doesn't have to mean growing dull; and, in fact, do their best to make sure they are growing better — by taking college courses.

Following are brief profiles of four of these women, their goals, their achievements, and mostly, their encouragement to other "older" women to give college a try.

The oldest grandmother enrolled at NNCC last semester was Mabel "Babe" McVae, who at 80 years of age is best known on campus for her "Do You Remember When" column in the college newspaper, The Round Table. Mabel is enrolled in the journalism class, and besides her column, participated with other class members in editorial decisions and layout of the publication. She is, in the words of one fellow classmate, "an inspiration. She never misses a class, and is always cheerful and very much on top of it."

Why does an 80-year-old woman go to college? Especially when it means negotiating your way with the aid of a walker?

"It was like Mohammed and the mountain...the mountain was there, so I climbed it," explains Babe. "I felt like I was dying on the vine, so I cast my weathered eye around...and I figured if I tried it, and it didn't work, nothing lost."

The loss would have been NNCC's. Babe, who resides at Ruby Mountains Manor, fell and broke her hip in December. At this writing she is not sure she will be able to manage the bi-weekly trip to journalism class, but she is expected to continue her remembrance column.

Another grandma going to college is Carol Gee, a young grandma and single parent who began her studies with trepidation.

"I hadn't been in school in 20 years, but, as someone told me, your brain is a muscle, and like any muscle, it has to be conditioned."

When Carol began in 1982 she found herself, like many students, short of money. Rather than let that deter her, she went to the guidance counselor who told her about an accounting scholarship, the course area of interest to her. She applied, received it, and paid for her first semester's tuition. It was enough to get her hooked.

Last semester's courses in Business Law and Financial Planning were made possible through a Soroptimist scholarship. In addition to going to college, Carol works as a floral stylist at Elko Floral. She has five grandchildren, and one on the way!

Her advice to others who may have been away from the academic scene for twenty years: "Most definitely give it a try! It gives you something to work toward, it broadens your horizons so you can go on to get a decent job, not just be a laborer. And even if you don't go for the 'heavy' courses, there are so many subjects of interest!"

For another young grandma, going to college began with a desire to obtain her high school diploma. Lacking three credit hours, Penny Urriola approached the college staff who were able to help. Once there she began taking other classes, and in her words, "got hooked on education."

Receiving her high school diploma in 1979 increased Penny's confidence ("It had always been a hang-up for me."), as did her success in her college classes. In November of 1983, after much self-questioning and market research Penny opened her own business, The Eleventh Street Bookstore. She continues to take college courses; Folk Lore, Visual Arts and College Singers last semester, and science or algebra classes this semester.

Her advice to other women: "Every woman who can, should go to college, even if they only take one class. Go for it, any way you can!"

Penny's grandson, whose photo is prominently displayed at her bookstore, lives in Salt Lake City and is 13-months old.

For many grandmothers, going to college leads to obtaining a degree. For others, going to college is going for the stimulation. For Pat Woosley of Pleasant Valley it has been a bit of both. Pat, a grandmother of four, began her college education in 1974 with just one class...Child Behavior. That led to others, and now she has both an Associate in Arts and Associate in Science degree!

And, she's still going to college!

Penny Urriola

Carol Gee

"I like to learn," she explains. "I feel when you're too old to learn, you're too old."

Sporting her "Fifty-'N-Nifty" T-shirt, she recites her philosophy toward life, "You don't stop having fun because you're too old; you're old because you stopped having fun." Going to college, for this energetic woman, is fun.

Last semester between school bus runs (she has been a school bus driver for ten years) she took classes in journalism and archaeology. She was a writer and co-editor of The Round Table. This semester she plans to enroll in Emergency Car Repairs for Women, an automotive class, and another class in computers or poetry.

Her advice to other grandmothers: "Go while you have the chance! It keeps you young and healthy. At least I've found it so."

All of these women interviewed encouraged other women to overcome any fears they have of entering college because of their age, or the number of years since they'd been in school. Their advice: choose one class of interest to you, and enroll. As has been their experience, your success will lead to others, and you'll never know if you don't try.

No fees are required for persons 62 and older except for labs and community services classes. Grandfathers also are encouraged to enroll at NNCC.

College students register early

Many Humboldt County students registered early for classes to be offered this spring semester by in the Northern Nevada Community College.

By 2 p.m. Thursday, the opening day of registration, nearly 100 students had signed up for classes. About 150 more students registered by the close of registration Saturday afternoon.

One of the more popular classes, beginning tole painting, was closed by noon Thursday. Enrollment in the class was limited to 10 students, but Barbara Tenney, director of the community college program, said the Another popular class is machine quilting. Renee Kern, a mother of two from Orovada, signed up for the class last Thursday. She said she wanted to improve her seam stitching and meet people since she had just moved to the area about three months ago.

Kern moved here from Gabbs, about 100 miles southeast of Fallon, with her husband and two daughters, a 10-month old and a 4-year-old.

As she carried the baby in one arm and registered with the other, she said she is taking machine quilting because "I thought it would be nice to meet people in Winportunity. When asked who will watch the children while she attends her Monday night class, she said their dad.

Kern is a self-taught seamstress, but she hopes to learn more about the art of machine quilting. And does she expect to have a quilt made by the end of the class? "I hope so. That's what I'm working for," she said.

Jeannette Ugaldea, a Winnemucca retiree, is also enrolled in the quilting class. She said her daughter had taken the course and "that's what inspired me."

In addition to quilting, vestment and financial planning, which she says is not a big class load for her.

Ugaldea once worked for the Bureau of Land Management and has taken other courses through the community college. She has two grown children and has lived in the area for 45 years.

"I've really enjoyed them (classes) now that I'm retired," Ugaldea said. "I'm just interested in things like this."

Ugaldea once took a photography class at the community college that she said was good and now she applies what she learned in the class for her classes and plans are being made to offer more vocational courses and upgrade the present ones, Tenney said. Some students aspiring to earn an associate degree sometimes worry

"but we do," Tenney said. Tenney said she has found most students to be quite excited about enrolling in classes this semester.

Registration next week at NNCC

Registration for the spring semester at Northern Nevada Community College begins next Thursday. Students can register Thursday or Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. The late registration period ends on Jan. 24.

Among the coming semester's offerings, fundamentals of income tax preparation will be taught during a 10-week course being offered by NNCC and the Nevada Small Business Development Center.

The first five weeks of the class will cover basic information about individual income taxes, including income, expenses, exclusions, deductions, credits and recent rulings. The second half of the course will provide information on sole proprietorships, partnerships and corporations.

Students can sign up for both halves, worth two credits, or just the first five weeks, one credit. The cost is $25 for the first five weeks and $45 for the 10-week version. EDPF 1-16-86

NNCC enrollment up 30 percent over 1984

Enrollment of students in state supported classes at the Northern Nevada Community College is up 30 percent over last year, reports Stan Alazzi, dean of student services at NNCC. A total of 2,000 students registered for the fall semester.

Alazzi explained a state supported class is one in a field of study recognized and funded by the state, as opposed to a community service class, such as sign language or bridge, which supports itself.

The percentage increase is the highest in the state, Alazzi pointed out. Enrollment at the University of Nevada Reno is down 2.8 percent, the University of Nevada Las Vegas is up 8.8 percent and Truckee Meadows Community College in Reno is up 1.1 percent.

Enrollment in Nevada's community colleges was up 7.8 percent statewide, while enrollment in the University of Nevada System, which includes community colleges and the universities, was up 5.6 percent.

Another set of figures supplied by Alazzi last week lists the percentage change of Full Time Equivalency enrollment. That figure is reached by dividing the total number of credits being taken by students by 15, the number an average full-time student takes.

Using those numbers, NNCC is up 15.5 percent. System wide, enrollment increased 2.5 percent in the FTE category.

Alazzi cited several reasons for NNCC's enrollment increase, including the college's special programs, such as the single-parent center and the English as a second language program, and the supportive attitude of the community towards NNCC.

NNCC's grandmothers: Coty Raposa-Floyd features four local grandmothers who are attending classes at Northern Nevada Community College in an article on Page 5 of today's paper. The accompanying photos were taken by her husband, Dennis J. Floyd. Above is Mabel McVae, 80, the oldest NNCC student enrolled last semester. Grandmothers, and all other Elko residents, can register for classes in NNCC's Spring Semester this Thursday and Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. in the college library. EDPF 1-14-86

Registration at NNCC slated today, tomorrow

Northern Nevada Community College registration started today and continues tomorrow, and Elko residents will be offered a weight training and aerobic dance class through the college during the fall semester, instructor Mariann LaMorte reports. She explained the class is not listed in the fall schedule.

The class will be offered Monday,

Wednesday and Friday mornings from 10 to 11 in the Women's Exhibit Building at the fairgrounds. LaMorte said both beginners and those at other levels of training can sign up during the fall registration period, running today until 8 p.m. and from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. tomorrow at the college. Due to the late creation of the class and its omission from the catalog, she said, students interested in her class will be allowed to sign up next week as well.

The class will consist of one half hour of light weight training followed by a half hour of aerobic dance. The class, open to both men and women, "is something that has to be stuck with," LaMorte added, explaining grading will be done on attendance.

College registration to open

Northern Nevada Community College will hold Spring registration on Jan. 16 through 18 at the college center, 395 W. Minor St.

The college is offering both self-paced and lecture classes. There are 26 audio and video classes, including business, electronics, history, child development, humanities, law, math, music appreciation, office administration, psychology and sociology. Some math and science classes are computer assisted.

Lecture classes include fundamentals of income tax preparation, emergency medical technician training, parenting skills — positive parenting, Spanish, French, geology, astronomy, radiography, children's literature, human nutrition, introduction to teaching the young child, fire prevention and building safety code seminar, technical drawing, sink the sub, substitute teacher workshop, emergency car repair for women, investment and financial planning seminar, criminal law, business communications, and basic ground school for pilots.

There are a variety of classes for physical fitness. Community service classes include leathercraft, crocheting, tatting, beginning tole painting, machine quilting, basic reloading for rifles and handguns, beginning guitar II, and beginning guitar for children, ages 8 to 16.

Trips are planned for the Spring semester, and include attending the annual Shakespeare festival, June 1-17, to be held in Ashland, Ore., and a trip to Provo, Utah, March 7-9, to view the Ramses I exhibit.

Of interest to high school juniors and seniors is a college study skills workshop. Students will learn how to take the SAT college entrance exam.

Teacher recertification classes, economics for teachers, multicultural and evaluation of reading instruction, will be offered on the Spring alternate schedule.

All students anticipating enrolling in either English or math classes for the first time need to take the appropriate placement test. Tests may be taken at the college center between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. Students are urged to take tests well in advance of registration.

The course schedule will appear in the Jan. 9 edition of The Sun.

64 sign up at NNCC

The Northern Nevada Community College extension in Ely had 64 students register yesterday for winter semester classes, Coordinator Peggy Hogan said.

She indicated she expects more students to register during the next registration session on Monday.

The community college is an extension of the main branch in Elko. It offers White Pine residents more than 45 classes to choose from and allows them to work towards a one-year certificate, Hogan said.

"We offer about 50 classes," Hogan said. "However we need at least 10 students in the class before we can go ahead with it."

Hogan said the community college out of Elko has extension colleges in several communities in Nevada including Winnemucca and Wells. Classes taken in extension can be applied towards a two-year degree if the student wishes to transfer to Elko.

"We have some interesting classes this semester," Hogan said. "We have a good photography class and also a class for amateur radio operators wanting to obtain a licence."

The college is also offering classes on beginning guitar, weight training, computers and several other fields, Hogan said.

Classes are taught out of White Pine High School and Ely Grade School in Ely. Most classes are run on week nights.

Classes start Jan. 27. The cost to students is $20 per credit hour. There is also a $5 fee for new students, Hogan said.

The next registration is Monday from 2:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. People seeking more information can call Hogan between 8 a.m. and noon at 289-3589.

NNCC summer session registration scheduled

Registration for Northern Nevada Community College's first six-week summer session will be held from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday, May 21, and Thursday, May 22, at the student services offices at the college.

Students will be able to enroll in a variety of classes from computers to ceramics. Several self-paced courses will be offered allowing students to schedule their studies for their own convenience. Field trips in biology, geology and a trip to the Shakespeare Theater Festival in Cedar City, Utah, will enhance the college's summer offerings.

Barbara Hebert, a true Cajun born and raised in Southern Louisiana, will teach a one-evening, authentic Cajun cooking class. Living among other Canadian-French, she grew up cooking Cajun dishes and will provide insight into this unique culture.

Ceramics instructor Jerry Genesives studied at the University of Nevada Reno, California College of Arts and Crafts and the Tuscarora Pottery School. He will teach hand-building techniques such as coil, slab and pinch and wheel throwing. Glazing and firing, including at least one raku firing, also will be featured.

Bill Alexander of Hico, Texas, will present a cutting horse clinic at the Spring Creek Horse Ralace in early August. Students will have the opportunity to train their own horses on fresh cattle with one of the top trainers in the country. More registration information is available by calling the student services office at 738-3433.

NNCC holding registration this week

Northern Nevada Community College will register students for the spring semester on Thursday and Friday. Registration will be held in the NNCC library, which will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. on both days for registration.

A special, one-day seminar, teaching marketing research tactics and methods of preparing comprehensive marketing plans for hotels and motels is among the classes being offered during the coming semester. The class is being offered by NNCC in conjunction with the Nevada Small Business Development Center.

The seminar is scheduled for Saturday, Feb. 8, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the college. The one-credit seminar will cost $25 and pre-registration is required.

Tom Davis, marketing manager for the High Sierra Hotel in Stateline will be the speaker. More information is available by calling Valerie Easterly at 738-3433, extension 245.

NNCC Registration is Underway on Thursday

Registration for more than 200 classes being offered during the spring semester at Northern Nevada Community College will be held this week.

Hours for registration will be from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Thursday, Jan. 17, and from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. Friday, Jan. 18.

Pre-registration counseling is available during normal business hours at the college.

Advisement day, when new and returning students have an opportunity to meet with their advisors and instructors, will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Wednesday, Jan. 15.

A wide variety of classes is offered, according to Charles Greenhaw, dean of instruction.

"Whether you're looking for a class in computers or crafts or just about anything else, NNCC probably has it in the schedule," Greenhaw said.

He noted that the college is accredited by the Northwestern Assoc. of Schools and Colleges, the regional accrediting agency.

University parallel courses are accepted within the University of Nevada System and by other accredited four-year institutions, Greenhaw added.

A tabloid publication which lists all the classes offered in the spring semester is available at several locations around Elko and from the student services office at the college.

Several forms of financial aid are available, including grants, loans and work-study programs, Joan Nivens, director of financial aid, said.

She suggested that anyone interested in obtaining financial aid to contact her office at the college.

"Many popular classes fill up quickly, and it is suggested that students register as early as possible on Thursday and Friday.

NNCC registration nears

Northern Nevada Community College will hold registration Thursday, Sept. 5, through Saturday, Sept. 7.

Hours will be: Thursday, noon-8 p.m.; Friday, 9 a.m.-4 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m.-1 p.m.

Financial aid director Joan Nivens will be at the college on Friday, Sept. 6 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Call 623-4824 for an appointment.

Most classes begin the week of September 9-13. Class schedules are available at the Winnemucca College Center, 395 Minor St.

Northern Nevada Community College encourages members of the community to take advantage of the numerous services available. Whether you are a teacher needing to recertify, looking to up-grade job skills, working to get an associate degree or two for fun, Northern Nevada Community College has something for you.

If you want or need a particular class and don't see it on the schedule, feel free to call and tell the staff about it. They will try to work it into a future schedule. Counseling service is also available.

Just call and make an appointment. Senior Citizens, 62 and older, can take classes free of charge except for one-half fee for community service classes.

NNCC signs 'em up

More than 50 signed up for classes yesterday during Northern Nevada Community College's first day of registration.

Most of those who filled out forms and plunked down their money signed up for two or three classes each, according to Ely NNCC coordinator Peggy Hogan. Business and computer classes again are proving popular, she said.

It's not too late to register, however. So far, all classes still have room for more students, Hogan said. All classes, which are held at the high school, are one, two or three credit-hours. Each credit-hour costs $20, so a three credit-hour class, such as shorthand, costs $60.

The next registration is set Tuesday, again at the public library. Hogan warned that if less than 10 sign up for a class, the class will be cancelled.

"We really want people to come," she said. "If anyone is thinking about taking a class, they should sign up."

Schedules can be obtained from the NNCC office, 612 Aultman, at the library, at Safeway and IGA, and at the two R-Places.

Registration: Registration for the spring semester at the Northern Nevada Community College continues today until 8:30 p.m. The group above was photographed during the opening rush yesterday morning and college officials noted the crowds were smaller today. Prospective students can sign up for classes in the NNCC library. For those not able to register today, a late registration period runs through Jan. 24.

College money

CARSON CITY (AP) - A bill to give the University of Nevada system $3.5 million for educational equipment was introduced in the Senate Tuesday.

SB140 would give $1.5 million to mines and engineering departments at University of Nevada, Reno; $1 million for instructional equipment and $300,000 for an environmental biology research facility at University of Nevada, Las Vegas; and $750,000 for equipment at the state's four community colleges.

Senate Finance Chairman Bill Raggio, R-Reno, said the equipment will be used so the college programs can obtain national accreditation in the various departments. The Finance Committee will study the measure at a later hearing.

Friday, Oct. 11

9 a.m.-4 p.m. - The Northern Nevada Community College will hold the fall alternate semester registration. Students who missed the main registration in September will have the opportunity to pick up classes in many subject areas. No late registration will be accepted. Come in at 395 W. Minor or call 623-4824 for more information.

Registration ends today for NNCC field trips

Registration ends at 5 o'clock tonight for two field trips offered through Northern Nevada Community College as part of its Spring Alternate Schedule.

The first class is planned April 25-27. It will feature a trip to the Quinn Canyon Range in central Nevada where the instructor-led class will view archaeological sites, bristlecone pines, bighorn sheep and many species of birds. The second offering is titled "Birdwatching in the Great Basin" and is slated May 1-3. Instructor Mark Ports will introduce the class to the 400 species of birds inhabiting Nevada.

Those signing up for the trip to the Quinn mountains will meet April 17 to organize the trip and a $25 fee will be collected to pay for board and room. Students will spend one night camping out.

"From bighorn sheep to 400 species of birds, from ancient shelters and archaeological sites to unique geological features, Nevada has it all," exclaimed Coty D. Raposa-Floyd of NNCC.

Both field trips are one-credit courses and late registration, with no late charge, will be held Monday at the college.

 for alternate semester

Registration for the spring alternate semester classes at Northern Nevada Community College is slated from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. tomorrow and from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday, the college reminds students.

Semester offerings include self-paced office administration classes: typing, office management, book-keeping, word processing and use of new laser printers.

Life Science instructor Mark Ports will conduct a bird watching field trip March 7.

In continuing professional and occupational education, classes in grant development, automotive air conditioning and the application of dental sealants are offered.

In March, Dr. George Manilla will repeat his successful one-day workshop, "Tutoring the Dyslexic Student." Other classes for educators are "Economics for Teachers," "The Exceptional Child," and "Language Development in the Preschool."

"Remote Sensing," a professional seminar for geologists, is scheduled in May.

Writers are offered "Getting Your Book Published," taught by Gibb Smith, publisher of Peregrine Smith

Books.

An intensive six-week training program for nursing assistants begins in March from which students will emerge ready to work as nursing assistants or home-health aides.

Intermediate and advanced skiers can spend a weekend at Snowbird with expert instruction by Roche Bush March 6-8.

Betty Finnas' "Self Realization Seminar" will be repeated in mid-March and an advanced class is offered the next day for those who have attended either earlier seminar.

Mike Morse of automotive technology will teach a class called "Breakdown! Emergency Car Repair for the Unmechanical" March 10 and 12.

With NNCC, the Women's Center is co-sponsoring "Assertive Communication" with Lisa Galindo as instructor.

"Landscaping for Homeowners," with special attention to the Elko climate, will be taught by Jim Cooney.

Besides these highlighted courses, many other short-term classes are listed in the spring catalog.

It used to be to check out a book at the county library you signed your name in a cheap, spiral notebook. That's all history now, because the White Pine County Public Library has joined the computer age.

Now to check out a book you whip out a little credit card-sized piece of plastic, hand it to the librarian, and watch him or her fool around with a video display terminal.

Library Director Bob Gray is so thrilled he can hardly contain his enthusiasm.

"Our old circulation system is gone," Gray exults. "I enjoy working at the circulation desk now."

Already, 1,166 county residents have applied for new library cards. "These are just people walking in the door," Gray says. Those who have already applied for their cards are asked to pick them up.

Library users who have not filled out a card application form are asked to do so. There's a few days wait to get a card, which are free.

Gray says he wants everybody who uses the 25,000-volume library (including miscellaneous items such as record albums and art prints) to be signed up for a new library card by July 1. His goal is 2,500 cards.

"It's really a savings in terms of time," Gray says. "We can do two hours worth of check-ins in less than 15 minutes." Also, Gray points out, fewer mistakes are made.

The $25,000 computer system, which has been in the planning stages since at least 1984, is being paid for by grants. "It's not cheap, but this is where it's at," Gray says. The first library book was "bar-coded," that is, labeled with a piece of electronically-readable tape, Dec. 27, 1984.

Besides the ease of checking books in and out, the computer system lets librarians take quick looks at what books other libraries have. Already, inter-library loans are up from 10 or 15 a month to more than 100, Gray marvels.

White Pine librarians can see what books are listed at the Humboldt and Elko county libraries, the Northern Nevada Community College, and Eureka and Lander county libraries.

"We also, eventually, will be able to query Clark County and Washoe within a few months," Gray says. "That will open the door even wider. All signs show an increase in inter-library loans. It's a two-way street. I think it's fantastic myself." Hooking up the computer with other libraries, and getting White Pine's own books onto computer tape took a lot of coordinating between state agencies and local volunteers and staff, Gray says.

In particular, the Nevada State Advisory Council of Libraries gave away the grant money. The Nevada State Library recommended the system, and the Washoe County Library helped get 3,500 Kinnear books listed onto a state data base.

The Clark County library is helping pick up phone costs for a computer line that stretches from a microwave station through the University of Nevada-Las Vegas to the Clark County library.

Carol Maddsen of the Elko County library helped out with technical aspects and helped administer grants.

Locally, Gray said, the effort to convert to computers couldn't have happened without the library board, the county commission and fellow-librarian Pat Bourn, who "roomrodded barcoding," Gray says. "We've done this faster than anybody in the state." "We could not have done barcoding without the assistance of volunteers."

Marguerite Evans Succumbs at Age 84

Marguerite Evans, a native of Elko, died yesterday, Nov. 26, at the age of 84. She had been in ill health for some time.

Mrs. Evans was born Aug. 9, 1901, to Webster and Lizzie Dorsey Patterson of Elko.

She received her early schooling in Elko and following graduation from the Elko County High School she enrolled at the University of Nevada, Reno. Later she transferred to Mills College, Oakland, Calif., from which she graduated with a B.A. Degree.

Following her graduation she married Harold Tracey McQuiston, a field engineer with the Nevada State Engineer's office. They lived in Southern Nevada. After several years in the southland she and McQuiston were divorced.

She then moved to Los Angeles, enrolling at the University of Southern California from which she received her Masters Degree.

Following this schooling she taught in several Elko Co. schools and the White Pine Co. High School. During World War II she left the WPHS to take a position as director of the Enlisted Men's Service Club at the U.S. Air Base, Wendover, Utah. Following the end of the war she returned to the teaching profession and retired as librarian at the Elko Co. High School in Elko.

In 1955 she married Charles B. Evans, Sr. He preceded her in death.

She was affiliated with the Pi Beta Phi Sorority, the AAUW, a charter member of the Elko Sororistomist Club, member of the Lamaille Women's Club, the Elko Garden Club, the Northern Nevada Community College Foundation and St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

In 1984 she received an award for Outstanding and Dedicated Service to the Community from the NNCC. In 1985 she became the recipient of the Trustee of the Year Award from the NNCC Foundation. In September, 1985, NNCC established the Marguerite P. Evans Entrepreneurial Scholarship for a period of two years.

She is survived by stepsons Charles B. Evans Jr., Elko, and Daniel Reese Evans, N.Y.; stepdaughter Virginia Monroe, Elko; sisters-in-law Margaret Howard, San Francisco, and Edna B. Patterson, Elko; nieces Marilyn E. Patterson, San Francisco, and Vera Lathiger, Michigan; and nephew John W. Patterson, Denver; and a number of grandchildren.

Those desiring to may contribute to the NNCC Foundation, St. Paul's Episcopal Church, the Northeastern Nevada Museum or the charity of their choice.

Funeral services will be held Saturday at 10 a.m. at the St. Paul's Episcopal Church. Private interment will follow.

NNCC spring barbecue set

May 8, 1986

tomorrow EDFP

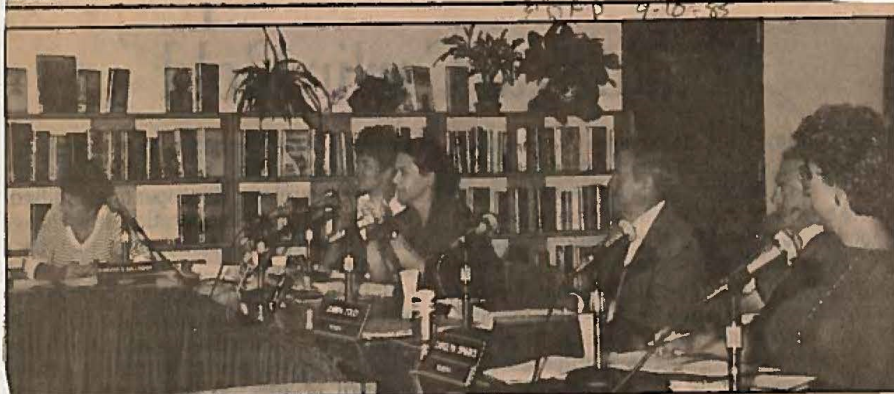

Northern Nevada Community College students and faculty are scheduled to face each other tomorrow in their annual softball game — part of the college's Spring Barbecue. Festivities are to begin at 2 p.m., with the big game slated at 6 o'clock.

Past, present and future NNCC students will turn out, the college said, to try their hands at cow and goat milking and calf haltering. At 5:30 p.m., student body officers for the upcoming year will be introduced.

Charles Greenhaw, dean of instruction at the college, will lead the faculty team as its starting pitcher. The public is invited to watch the game, which will be held on the NNCC campus.

BEND! Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 10:30, the Senior Citizens can be found at their Pleasant Center exercising. Ruth Michaelson, a Senior hired through the Community College to teach the classes, directs the group, along with taped music, as they lubricate and stretch muscles. Carol Bricker, director at the Center, says this is the best exercise program conducted at the Center. There are no strenuous exercises, and everyone is encouraged to do whatever they are able. One participant recently had knee surgery and still exercises with her artificial knee. Charlotte Stanford of Winnemucca is pictured here doing deep knee bends with the aid of a chair.

University of Nevada System Board of Regents met at Northern Nevada Community College on Thursday and Friday. The regents agreed to cooperate with the Nevada Commission on Economic Development in seeking passage of Question 5 on the fall 1986 ballot. That question seeks a share of federally imposed estate taxes for the state to be used for education. Regent Dorothy Gallagher of Elko is at far left.

BY GWEN BOGH

A determined working mother who has spent long hours continuing her education, striving toward a goal, graduated from Northern Nevada Community College this week.

Dalene Taulli said, "I wanted to get my two-year degree," and that's exactly what she has done. She has earned an associate degree with an emphasis in administration of justice.

Winnemucca has been Mrs. Taulli's home for the past four and one half years. She is married to Don Taulli, a deputy with the Humboldt County Sheriff's Department. They have a son, Bill, 14, and a foster daughter, Wendy Baker, 16.

Mrs. Taulli, 33, doesn't hesitate to take on challenges. She attended college, taking two to three courses per semester, while at the same time maintaining a full time job as a youth supervisor at Leighton Hall juvenile detention center.

It's not easy to keep up with the challenges, but Taulli says she has managed, despite working swing shift at the detention center.

There are advantages and disadvantages of working swing shift. Mrs. Taulli was able to study during the morning hours when it was quiet, but the late schedule made it difficult for her to enroll in some courses.

A busy schedule doesn't allow much free time to do chores at home, she said. But she delegates some of the work to her children.

Prior to her enrollment at Northern Nevada Community College, Mrs. Taulli attended Riverside City College for about a year and a half taking general study courses.

She enrolled in the junior college at age 17, after completing high school in three years.

Returning to school was a rewarding experience for Mrs. Taulli. She said one day she looked at the newspaper, saw the courses offered and signed up for a few.

It was fortunate, though, that one of the first courses she took at the community college turned out to be a favorite - an English class, which she said was "great."

The course was self-paced, meaning the lecture was on video tape and could be viewed at a student's own speed. But it requires self-motivation, Mrs. Taulli said.

While she said she prefers lecture classes, she said she likes the video course. She said her English instructor, Genie Goicoechea, would come to Winnemucca from the community college in Elko and discuss the work assignments.

Some have said the one thing lacking in video tape lectures is an instructor to provide immediate feedback to students.

Another class that proved to be informative and well worth the time was Principles of American Government. It was taught by Jim Porter, the principle at Sonoma Heights School.

"He really brought it to life," she said.

Mrs. Taulli said while she was intent on keeping up with her courses, there were some distractions along the way during the two years, such as holidays. There's so much activity at Thanksgiving and Christmas, that "you tend to let school get a little behind."

But even the distractions didn't keep Taulli from fulfilling her goal. "I'm not one who likes to give up."

Taulli said she will continue her work at the juvenile detention center.

NNCC releases Dean's List

EDFP 6-20-86
The Spring semester Dean's List at Northern Nevada Community College had three full-time students with a straight A grades, according to Dean of Student Services, Stan Alazzi.

Richard Adkins, Terry Beehler and Louise Saltz ended the semester and entire 1985-86 school year earning all A's.

Sixteen other NNCC students earned a 3.50 grade point average or better while taking 12 semester credits, or more. They are: Wendy Windham, Sharon Johnson, Debra Tempel, Debbie Giles, Terri Digiammo, Daniel Ahern, Clay Christensen, Dan Christensen, Judy Emerson, Leslie Felton, Nola Brown, Julie Alfred, Audrey Smith, Mike Lenox, Barbara Potter and Paul McKenzie.

Registration for the fall semester at NNCC is August 27 and 28.

Adult students receive high school diplomas

Eight Elko County residents recently graduated from the Elko Adult High School, according to Jackie Banghart, an instructor with the high school.

Amy Carr, Ruth Benvenuto, Tammy Hodgson, Dorothy Howard, Lynda Black, Linda Stott, Beverly Wilson and Mike Mayfield received their high school diplomas on Thursday of last week. Pam Woodcock and Corey Paulus graduated earlier in the year, Banghart added, making this year's total the same as a year ago, the first year of the program.

Banghart said the Elko Adult High School operates under the supervision of the Elko County School District and students complete the same credit requirements as students in the district's other high schools. An additional 30 students this year received GED — General Education Development — certificates. Banghart explained the GED degree, the equivalent of a high school diploma, is obtained by passing a test covering a variety of subjects, and no credit requirements are imposed.

The adult education division of the Elko County School District is directed by Charles Borden, vice principal at Elko High School.

University regents set meeting here this week

10-7-85

Galloway said the regents will give special attention to another new computer-based program at NNCC called PLATO. The school already offers telecommunications instruction throughout its service area, which encompasses central and northern Nevada. And the 1985 Nevada Legislature appropriated more than $170,000 to supplement that by adding the PLATO system.

PLATO will provide lower-division math, science and engineering classes to the system, Galloway said. "An estimated 90 percent of the population in NNCC's service area — including Winnemucca, Elko, Ely and Battle Mountain — will have access to the PLATO curriculum.

As well as hearing the NNCC presentations, the regents also are scheduled to meet jointly with the Commission on Economic Development at 1:30 p.m. Friday.

Northern Nevada Community College is slated as the site for Thursday and Friday meetings of the University of Nevada System Board of Regents, according to Pamela E. Galloway, director of public information for the state university system.

Galloway said the regents, university system officials and administrators from Nevada's other institutions will tour NNCC and hear presentations concerning the college's programs.

She noted the regents will be familiarized with NNCC's tutoring, Adult Basic Education and English as a Second Language programs and will see the college's new Single Parent Center and Small Business Development Center.

Aiazzi Appointed Dean at NNCC

ET 5 23-90

Stan Aiazzi has been appointed dean of student services at Northern Nevada Community College, announced college president Dr. Bill Berg. Aiazzi had been acting dean since July. He has been with the college since 1971, when he began as vocational agriculture instructor. He subsequently served as director of cooperative education, administrative assistant to the president, and associate dean of occupational services. He earned bachelor and master's degrees in agriculture economics at the University of Nevada-Reno.

He served as trustee and chairman of the board for Elko General Hospital and was chairman of the Nevada Advisory Council of Hospital.

He is a native of Carlin and is former president of the Nevada Civic Club of Elko and the Northeastern Nevada Horsemen's Association and a former director of Nevada Jaycees.

He and his wife Joyce have two daughters, Pamela and Dina.

Easterly Named to NNCC Business Center

ET 6-23-86

Dean of Instruction Charles Greenhaw announced last week that Valerie Easterly has been named business analyst for the Nevada Small Business Development Center at Northern Nevada Community College.

Operated under the auspices of the U.S. Small Business Administration and the University of Nevada, Reno, the center is the first to serve rural Nevada. In her position, Easterly will offer advice to new and existing small businesses in the areas of business practices, marketing, personnel and start-up.

Easterly is a native of New Jersey and graduated from Vassar in 1974, earning a BA in government from that New York institution. She was vice president in charge of credit administration at Seattle Trust and Savings for eight years. Prior to that, she was a loan officer at Hibernia Bank in San Francisco.

Easterly and her husband, Eric, reside in Elko, and have one child, three year old Susannah.

NNCC names Evans Trustee of the Year

10-12-85 EDFP

Marguerite P. Evans was recently named Trustee of the Year by the Northern Nevada Community College Foundation, reports Ginger Rackley, foundation director.

Rackley said this is the first year the award has been given. She noted there are 32 foundation trustees, who represent all areas in the state served by the college.

Evans has been a trustee since the foundation was formed in 1982. Rackley said the Elko native was honored because of her contributions to the college through her fund-raising efforts, encouragement and enthusiasm.

Evans, now in her early 80s, has been a teacher and librarian in several parts of eastern Nevada. She conceived the Lamolle Country Fair and was the founder of the Lamolle Library.

It was Evan's willingness to work single-handed for a good community cause that proved her worth to the foundation, Rackley added.

Rackley said Evans spearheaded the college's first direct-mail, fund-raising campaign. "She has a lot of spunk and character," Rackley added. "She's a neat lady. A unique individual."

Evans was notified of the award at last month's trustees' meeting. It was the second time in September that the NNCC staff had honored her. Evans' name also was given to a new scholarship: the Marguerite P. Evans Entrepreneurial Scholarship. The $3,600 scholarship, spread over two years, will be made to the full-time student who best exemplifies the qualities needed to become a successful innovator in the field of business.

Rackley said anyone who wishes to donate to the Evans scholarship fund can contact her at 738-8493.

Jewell Hanna receives AAUW award in April

EDFP

Jewell Hanna from Elko was one of this year's recipients of the American Association of University Women (AAUW) Humanities Award announced at the annual Nevada division convention in Sparks in April. Mary Carter from Fallon was also selected. "Both women have spent many hours following through on their commitment to bettering women's lives through AAUW," reports Anne Stilwell of AAUW.

Hanna has been a member of the Elko branch of AAUW for 13 years. She has been involved in various community projects which AAUW has sponsored, including after-school instruction of ESL students before the school district offered instruction and being deputized to help register voters at community events. She has also been involved with AAUW at the state, national and international levels and has represented the Elko branch at four AAUW National Conventions and at three International Federation of University Women conventions.

Carter, from the Fallon AAUW branch, initiated the building of the Western Nevada Community College campus in Fallon.

Three women from the Elko branch, Hanna, Peggy Crawford and Anne Stilwell, all attend the Sparks convention.

In order to join AAUW a woman must have earned a bachelor's degree at an accredited college or university. Women interested in membership are invited to contact Doris D'Asto or Crawford.

reports on March cruise

Reporting on the tour to the Caribbean sponsored by Northern Nevada Community College March 21-29, NNCC art instructor Sarah Campsey and tour organizer said the trip was "successful on many accounts."

The NNCC group was made up of 20 members, Campsey said, aboard the cruise ship Holiday, which she described as the second largest cruise liner in operation.

Islands explored by the group included St. Martin (Dutch-French), St. Thomas (U.S. Virgin Island) and Nassau (Bahamian).

Campsey said visiting the studio of Martin and Gloria Lynn, sculptor and painter, on the island of St. Martin was a highlight of the trip, as were visits to various batik and block-print galleries. Drawings and photographs made by the group will be included in the spring semester exhibit in the college library opening May 6.

"Visiting the underwater coral reef on St. Thomas, Shell Beach, Megan Bay, the Straw Market in Nassau and Bluebeard's Castle were only a few of our island adventures," Campsey notes. She said the cruise ship was given a spectacular send-off from St. Thomas with a fireworks display.

She reports Thelma Weaver and Fern Collins picked up international bridge master points as winners of shipboard play; Mary Branscomb brought home a trophy for her performance in the melodrama on Talent Night; Campsey and Michael Madigan were winners at Costume Night in Halley's Comet costumes; and Madigan, Collins and Weaver were bingo event winners.

Other members of the cruise group were Mary and Bill Berg, Grace and Don Erskine, Mary Radziner, Ann Haglund, Lill Boyer, Anita Dickie, and Georgia and Ross Hemsley, all of Elko; Barbara and Jim Eardley and Stacia Day, Reno; Ines Beers, Craig, Colo.; and Madge Stock, Wendover. Weaver is from Goshen, Ind.; and Collins, Elkart, Ind.

Campsey notes this was the tenth group tour she's led and it is not necessary to be a college student to travel with the group, although pre-trip lectures, movies and slide shows are offered and college credit extended to all participants.

Spaces are still available for the summer tour to the Orient, she said. The two-week tour will leave July 12 for Tokyo, Hakone, Kyoto, Taipei and Hong Kong. Those interested may contact Campsey at 738-8493 or 738-5770 for details. Deposits will be required by May 1.

Future trips planned include a trip to Galapagos Island at Christmas time; a cruise is on the agenda for the spring semester 1987; and in the summer, a trip to either Alaska or Spain and Portugal.

Dr. Berg, Mrs. Gallagher at council meeting

Community college plan goes to regents

The board of regents, which governs higher education in Nevada, will be asked in August to approve the proposed city construction of a Northern Nevada Community College building in Winnemucca.

Dorothy Gallagher of Elko, who recently filed for re-election as the regent representing rural Nevada, told Winnemucca council members Tuesday that she would seek the normal approval from the regents. She said no one can always accurately predict what the regents will do, but believes they will approve the arrangement.

Mayor Warren Scott, who was responsible for the city council placing the college building construction measure on the November general election ballot, and Mrs. Gallagher are in agreement that the understanding of the regents and the city should be in writing.

As outlined by the mayor, the city would lease the building proposed in the vicinity of Lowry High School on land provided by the Bureau of Land Management, for only a dollar a year.

The college would maintain the building.

Dr. William Berg, president of the college, which is headquartered in Elko, said he recently extended the college's lease of the building it is now using in Winnemucca. He said the rent for five years had been paid by Bob Cashell of Wild West Enterprises, but now it will be paid by the college.

Scott proposed the city construct the college building a couple of months ago because the current building is not large enough, and that the owner of the building would need to increase the rent another $700 a month if he added to it. With addition, the building would have about 3,000 square feet, the same as in the new structure.

Ray Pearson, president of the chamber of commerce, and a Wild West Enterprises executive, was in the audience with Don Smit, a Winnemucca contractor. Both questioned the wisdom of the people spending as much as $460,000 for a building that would be no larger than one that could be expanded for $40,000.

The mayor said $40,000 in public funds could not be invested in a private building. But, he said, even if it could, the college would be tied to a third of an acre site, which would hinder expansion. Still, they questioned why the college couldn't pay the higher rent for a larger building with no direct expense to the community.

Clarification was also asked of a comment by Berg that equipment scheduled to be purchased for the College has new director

By Gwen Bogh
Sun Staff Writer

It's a "tremendous feeling" to help people meet their goals by serving as the director of the Northern Nevada Community College, Barbara Tenney said.

Tenney is a Brigham Young University graduate. She obtained a bachelor of science degree in 1954 in Foods and Nutrition. Since then she has worked at a potato processing plant as a lab technician and at two newspapers working as a typesetter and a past-up person.

Over the years Tenney and her husband Miles, whom she married in 1953, had six children. They range in age from 19 to 31 years of age.

For the last four years Tenney's artistic abilities kept her busy at the Humboldt Sun doing paste-up.

Tenney recently assumed the position of director about a month ago when her predecessor, Ray Edwards, left to coordinate the Alternative Education program for drop outs.

Counseling students to choose courses is a satisfying experience, Tenney said. The community college students are as young as 16 and as mature as 78 years old.

There are times when Tenney has gone to great lengths for students in the last few weeks. Because she is relatively new at the community college, Tenney had difficulty answering some of the questions from students.

But she did not stop there. The students deserves an answer to each and every question and an answer they receive from her. She does not lead them astray by pretending to know the answer and she will tell them that "I don't know (the answer) but I'll try to find out for you."

One particular student, Tenney recalled, wanted to become a court reporter. While the community college does not offer the proper courses that would prepare a student to take the test to become certified, she found out what educational institution offered the appropriate courses. But not without quite a bit of research.

Tenney said court reporting is "a very specialized type of training." There is a tremendous shortage in Nevada and California for them, she added.

Having a community college in a small community like Winnemucca is beneficial to those who have a desire to learn but for various reasons relocate to a larger town or expend the time and money commuting. Tenney said that the community college offers a variety of classes and learning opportunities for citizens.

In addition, the community college provides recertification courses to Humboldt County teachers, introductory classes for nursing and exercising courses that are free to senior citizens over 62 years of age.

The community college in Winnemucca is one of eight "permanent centers" under the direction of Dr. William G. Berg, president of the Northern Nevada Community College in Elko. The others are located in McDermitt, Battle Mountain, Ely, Eureka, Wells, Owyhee and Wendover.

Northern Nevada Community College is open until 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday and up until 6 p.m. on Friday. On Saturdays the hours are from nine to noon.

About 24 instructors teach at the NNCC this semester. While the totals have not been finalized, there are approximately 275 students registered this fall of whom 72 are full time students. Full time students are those who take 12 or more credits in a semester.

Students can obtain an associate of arts degree in general studies — usually acquired after a two years, taking a full load of class that equal 60-64 credits.

Most of the classes offered at NNCC are college transferrable. In fact, Tenney cited an example where one student transferred to a university that "took every one of her credits. The higher learning institution was Brigham Young University.

Tenney said that the college makes a special effort to offer as many lecture classes as possible but unless there are at least 12 people signed up for a particular lecture class it is cancelled. However, a student has the option of transferring to another class or receiving a refund if a class is cancelled.

Lecture classes are generally held at Lowry High School, Winnemucca Junior High School and Sonoma School.

Registration for the fall schedule closed Sept. 13 but Tenney explained that the alternate schedule should be out by mid-October. The alternate schedule is a compilation of short courses, seminars and self-paced courses.

According to Tenney, the community college expects 100 new students to register for alternate classes.

Short courses might include business math or U.S. History. The topics for seminars might be drug abuse or child abuse — generally offered on the weekend.

Self-paced courses are those in which the student can go at his or her own pace. The student can work as "fast or as slow as their time permits," Tenney said.

Much of the instructional material is on video tapes, films strips, audio tapes and computers. A lesson plan prefaces each self-paced course. Some tests are administered by Tenney.

According to Tenney, the self-paced courses have been very successful and work well for those who cannot free themselves during work hours.

Glaser, Nivens Named To Miller Campaign

Norm Glaser

Former State legislator Norm Glaser and Northern Nevada Community College administrator Joan Nivens will serve as co-chairmen for the Elko County Committee to Elect Bob Miller Lieutenant Governor, according to an announcement this week from the Miller campaign.

Glaser, an Elko County cattleman, has spent 26 years in public service, much of that time in the Nevada Legislature. He served as Speaker of the Assembly during the 1964 session.

A veteran of World War II, Glaser served as an assemblyman from 1961-1972, and served in the state senate from 1976-1982, chairing the Taxation and Natural Resources committees. In addition, he was a member of the Senate Finance Committee. As an assemblyman, Glaser chaired the powerful Ways and Means Committee.

Glaser and his wife, Nelda, live in Halleck. They have three children.

For more than two years, Nivens has been the director of financial aid and veterans' coordinator at Northern Nevada Community College. Before that, she was executive director of the NNCC foundation and director of social services at Elko General Hospital. While working at the hospital, Nivens implemented the "LifeLine" program for the handicapped and elderly citizens of Elko County.

A graduate of the University of Nevada, Reno, Nivens is president of the Nevada Association of Financial Aid Administrators. She also serves as a member of the Elko Order of Soroptimist International and the Ruby View Golf Association.

"I am honored," Miller said in a statement accompanying the appointments, "to have two people as accomplished as Joan and Norm chair my campaign in Elko County."

Northern Nevada Community College instructor Carl Diekhans, director of computing and mathematics, holds a copy of Business BASIC, which he wrote with two fellow computer instructors. The book was just recently published, he said, and should be in use in colleges by next year. He added the book will be used by college business students studying BASIC computer language.

Diekhans writes book

Carl Diekhans, director of mathematics and computing at Northern Nevada Community College, recently has had a computing book published, NNCC spokesman Coty Raposa-Floyd reports. The book is Diekhans' first.

Diekhans is one of three authors responsible for Business BASIC, a book he said "emphasizes structured programming, something that gets into real life. Almost all of the programs could be modified and used right away in a business."

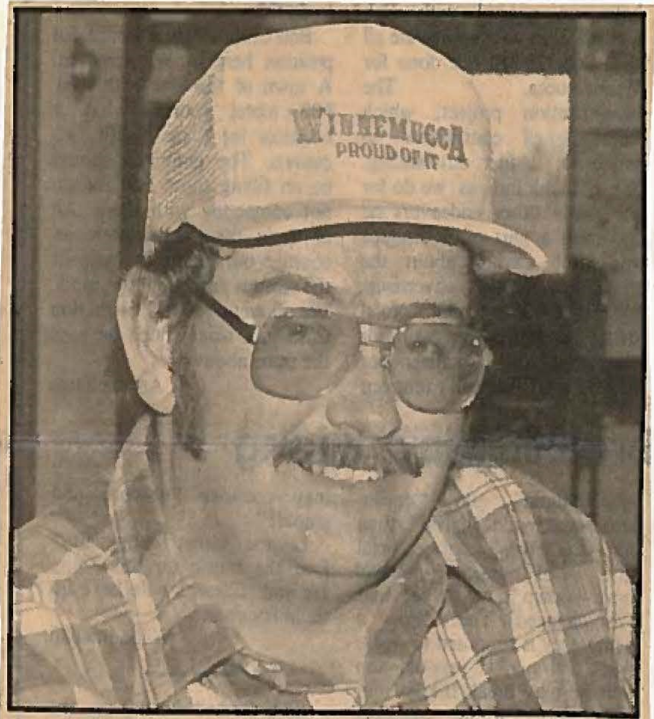

Diekhans' co-authors are fellow computer instructors Penny Fanzone of the Essex Community College in Baltimore, Md., and Tom Hankins of the West Virginia Institute of Graduate Studies in West Virginia.

The book is published by Mitchell Publishing, publishers of many college texts, Diekhans said. He added the book was completed in only one year, a time requirement set by the publisher at the beginning of the writing stage.

NNCC spokesmen said the book will be used next year at several colleges teaching BASIC — Beginners All-purpose Symbolic Instruction Code.

Diekhans and his wife, Nadine, have three daughters, Bonnie, a junior at the University of Utah; Carlene, a senior at Elko High School; and Cheryl, a freshman at EHS.

Jerry Marcuerquiaga didn't sleep much

Winnemucca man achieves his goal

BY GWEN BOGH

Winnemucca's Jerry Marcuerquiaga, who graduated from the community college this week, says, "I guess it's just perseverance" that kept him plugging away at earning enough semester hours for a degree.

"I think it's a long time coming," Marcuerquiaga said.

Between his job at Leighton Hall detention center as a work program supervisor and his business, Gandalf Dart Service, and his memberships in French Ford Lions, Basque and Winnemucca Dart Clubs, Marcuerquiaga has managed to find the time to attend classes at Northern Nevada Community College.

"There's not many hours left for sleep," with a busy schedule, he said. But that's the way he likes it. "You've got to do something with your time."

He said he managed to complete his education at the community college within a year because he only lacked about 25 semester hours for an associate degree.

During the last several years, he said he has picked up classes, "now and then." His work schedule didn't allow him to become a fulltime student.

Marcuerquiaga said he was enrolled at the University of Nevada Reno for a couple of years. "I tried a little bit of everything" from math and accounting to having a good time.

Later the Army sent him to Germany, where he stayed for 14 years, five years in the military and the remainder as a civilian. (He was a government inspector, and then owned clock and antique shops in Wiesbaden and Heidelberg.)

His original intention was to obtain a bachelor's, master's or a doctorate degree. "I let myself be led off course, but this is something to put me back on course," he said of his community college work.

Marcuerquiaga said of all his classes at the community college, his favorite courses were Ideas and Creative Thinking and Juvenile Delinquency, which were lecture courses.

The self-paced courses, which are on video tape, are tough to get started on because, "There's nobody to report to except yourself," he said. "Help is readily available" for some of them, though.

"Some classes aren't worth beans," he said. But the better ones are usually those taught by instructors who offer guidance and who care about a student's progress.

The only drawback at the school, Marcuerquiaga said, is "you can't go further (beyond an associate degree) — that's the limitations here."

He says the college serves a purpose and the people there "give it their best shot and you can't ask for more than that."

Studying is an integral part of a being a student and Marcuerquiaga does his share. But there are times when homework might be delayed for a good book. He says he reads 10-12 per semester.

Marcuerquiaga said he intends to remain working at the detention center because he likes his job. He said he would also like to continue his education in juvenile justice.

EDFP 10-14-85 NNCC staff changes reported for 1985-86

Carl Diekhans has been named director of mathematics and computer science at Northern Nevada Community College. Seated is Georgia Hemsley, project coordinator-counselor for the college's new single parent center.

Carl Diekhans has been appointed director of mathematics and computer science at Northern Nevada Community College where he has taught those courses since 1980. Diekhans holds a master's degree in mathematics from Montana State University.

In other staff changes at NNCC for the upcoming school year, Sharron Racine will be coordinator of administrative services, overseeing grants, off-campus centers, adult basic education and the Abecedary Project. During the past year Racine was coordinator of adult education and the Abecedary Project, a tutoring program for young high school drop outs and high school students in danger of flunking out.

Pat Warren has been named coordinator of continuing education. She will set up classes in continuing education and community service and act as liaison between NNCC and professional groups and other Nevada universities and colleges. Warren has been telecourse coordinator at NNCC for the past two years.

Karen Tempel, who holds bachelor's degrees in medical technology and metallurgical engineering, will teach computer classes and supervise the NNCC computer lab. Tempel worked last year in NNCC's computing services and was a math tutor.

Susan Conquest will be supervising tutor in the Abecedary Project. Conquest was a tutor in the program last year and coordinated Job Opportunities in Nevada — a summertime youth tutoring program. She has a bachelor's degree in natural resources with emphasis in biology and geography.

Georgia Hemsley is the project coordinator-counselor for the new NNCC Single Parent Center for Career and Life Planning. Before coming to Elko, Hemsley was Apache Indian counselor and head district counselor for Globe High School in Globe, Ariz. While there, she implemented the Individualized Vocational Education Plan, which became one of the models for the state program, according to Racine.

Hemsley has master's degrees in education guidance counseling and counseling from Arizona State University.

Museum hosts Campsey show; Germino photos

EDFP

Sarah Campsey, chairman of Northern Nevada Community College Art Department, is featured artist and sculptor at the Northeastern Nevada Museum during June. Her show opened Saturday.

And a special exhibit of color and black and white photographs of Nevada by Silver City photographer Bill Germino is also on display through June. Germino's show features 19 Cibachromes and silver prints.

"Campsey has been a moving force in the art field in Elko," notes museum director Howard Hickson. "She once said experimenting and experiencing is what art is all about. Her work reflects that philosophy, she tackles just about anything in the world of art and usually comes out a winner."

Hickson explained Campsey's interest in art began when she was recuperating from polio. Campsey explains, "Had I not had polio, I would not have been exposed to art at any early age."

She is a native of Sweetwater, Texas; attended Sul Ross State University at Alpine, Texas; and received her degree in art education from West Texas State University in Canyon. In 1977 she earned a master's degree in education from the University of Utah.

After moving to Elko, she worked as a substitute teacher for nine years and, in 1971, became a part-time instructor at NNCC, a full-time instructor in 1974. She developed a pioneer arts and crafts program in which students made cheese and root beer, quilted and learned to spin and weave.

Hickson noted she has done soft sculptures of people and in the present show has gone a step in reverse with a steel quilt.

Campsey's honors include the Governor's Art Award for contributions to folk arts; 1979 Elko Woman of the Year; a National Endowment for Humanities fellowship in 1960 at the University of California, Berkeley; and a teaching fellowship at the University of Utah, 1976-77.

Germino has lived in Silver City since 1974 and works exclusively with 4x5-inch negatives. His work has been published in several Nevada books and Nevada magazine.

His museum exhibit, partially funded by the Nevada State Council on the Arts and National Endowment for the Arts, is of people, landscapes, towns and buildings. Germino said he also received encouragement and funding from Barbara and Ken Kruger, Reno.

Hickson invites everyone to see the two June shows; no admission is charged.

Mr. and Mrs. Ferron Konakis

Wooden and Konakis married March 22

Tracy Lee Wooden and Ferron Stanley Konakis were united in marriage at St. Paul's Episcopal Church at 4 p.m. March 22. The Rev. Hanniffin performed the double-ring ceremony.

Silk flowers, satin bows and fresh ferns decorated the church. Joyce Shaw sang "There is Love" and "Nobody Loves Me Like You Do."

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Ronald D. Wooden.

The bride wore a white-satin gown with a sheer net and satin bodice accented with pearls and sequins. Her train was of lace with five-foot trailing bows.

Matron of honor was Audrey Oster of Sandpoint, Idaho. Bridesmaids were Janie Arnold and Hiedi Hackett, both of Reno. Each wore a rose-colored, street-length dress with heart-shaped bodice with tie waist. Flower girls were Cammie Oster and Angie Oster, daughters of Audrey Oster, and each wore a pink, lace-covered, knee-length dress.

Nick Konakis served as best man; Richard Hull and Mitch Uriarte were ushers; candle lighter was Dale Wooden; and ring bearer was Timothy Hansford.

The bride's mother wore a street-length dress of cream-colored chiffon; the bridegroom's mother, a dress of floral-print chiffon.

The reception was at the Stockmen's Motor Hotel, where a four-tier wedding cake, decorated by the bride's mother and topped with crystal and fresh, pink carnations, was served from a table decorated with flower baskets and Greek confetti.

The newlyweds honeymooned in Reno and Los Angeles, Calif., and returned April 1 to reside in Elko.

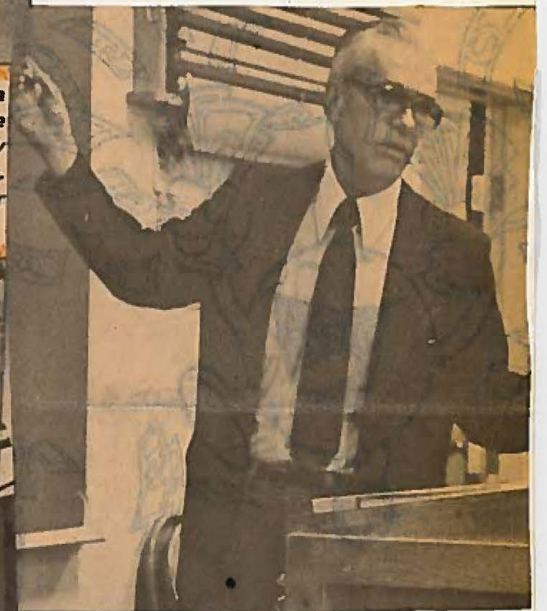

The new Mrs. Konakis is a graduate of Elko High School and is student body president at Northern Nevada Community College. She will graduate in May.

Konakis is an Elko High School graduate and attended the University of Reno, graduating with a bachelor of science degree in Civil Engineering.

Mrs. Konakis is a tutor at NNCC and Konakis, a licensed project engineer with Kennedy-Jenks-Chilton Engineering.

This is the final academic year of teaching at Northern Nevada Community College for Paul Shelley Hanna, top, senior member of the NNCC faculty. He was recently named Distinguished Faculty Member by the University of Nevada system board of Regents. Retirement, he said, will give him a chance to go back into his other profession, field archeology.

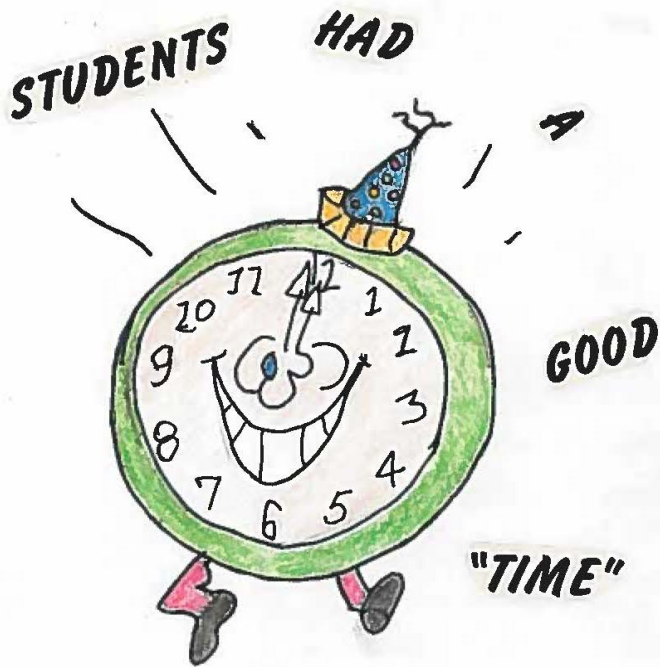

An avid war historian, Hanna maintains a "War Room" in the basement of his Northside home where he indulges his passion for historical war games. At left, he and opposing general Gary Avent work out the details of a World War II desert campaign between the British and Italians in North Africa. Above, Hanna delivers pre-test instructions to a class in world religions. "If you don't know the answer, guess," he advised.

Caribbean cruise: luxury and learning in paradise

6-24-86 EDP

By Jeff Mullins
Relaxing in the luxury of a massive cruise ship and exploring hideaways of infamous pirates were among the highlights of a recent trip to the Caribbean offered through the Northern Nevada Community College art department.

A group of Elko residents, led by NVCC art instructor Sarah Campsey, took the trip last March aboard the Holiday, a pleasure craft operated by Carnival Cruise Lines. The tour was offered as a field trip for college credit, providing an educational experience in a subtropical paradise.

A few local residents who took part in the tour, recently gathered to discuss the experience, and most declared their intention to return to the area next year.

The trip started out as a less-than-desirable experience when members of the group reached Miami on March 11 and were greeted by the same cold, wet weather they were trying to escape.

Rough start

Traveler Ann Haglund said the first few days of the cruise were on rough seas, the huge ship swaying in 20-foot swells as it whipped its way southeast from the Florida coast.

"The boat did rock and roll," she observed.

But only a couple of passengers with the Elko group got seasick, Campsey said, and they improved quickly after getting a shot from the physician on board.

After 2 1/2 days on the high seas, the ship landed at St. Martin, a Caribbean island, part of which is owned by the French and part by the Dutch.

The island was a bit of a surprise to most members of the group.

"It had a lot of cactus and sand and brush — sort of a dry island," explained Haglund.

Compared to the traditional tourist spots in the Caribbean, which the group had anticipated, St. Martin appeared to be underdeveloped and impoverished, they said. But there were some interesting aspects to be explored, as each member of the group headed off in various modes of transport — four-wheel-drive vehicles, taxis or mopeds.

Campsey said her excursion took her and a companion to a beach covered with a layer of seashells.

The travelers visited artists' studios and galleries and enjoyed the local cuisine, which Campsey described as similar to French-Cajun.

Mary Branscomb of Lamolle, who took the tour with her mother and cousin from Indiana, saw metal sculptures created by a former fellow Hoosier, Howard DeMyer.

Fireworks sendoff

The group left St. Martin with an incredible fireworks sendoff, then cruised all night until landing at St. Thomas.

This island was much different than the previous one.

"St. Thomas was very tourist-developed. There were lots of shops," commented Mary Berg, who was accompanied on the tour by her husband, Dr. Bill Berg.

"There was a Calypso band that played all the time," she said.

"Everyone was real comfortable there," added Campsey.

In a private journal written about the tour, Haglund wrote:

"Arriving at Coki Point and Coral World we unloaded, prepared to see an underwater reef environment. Descending a spiral iron staircase, we went down into an underwater world. Seeing strange sea life was fascinating. I saw one fish whose only spot of color was a pale blue outlining a solid black body. Moray eels, sharks and other unknown fish swam in endless circles."

Pirate castles

St. Thomas also contained relics of pirate lore, including homes of the famous buccaneers Bluebeard and Blackbeard.

Haglund wrote:

"Bluebeard's castle and resort was the next stop on the tour. The old stone tower was framed by a four-color bougainvillea. Inside the tower we had welcome relief from the heat. The temperature dropped twenty degrees and the wind blew through the open doors. Small ponds were choked with water lilies, open to the sun. Lavender, fuchsia and white blossoms were inhabited by buzzing bees. In the middle of one pond was a delightful sculpture of a mermaid commemorating one of Bluebeard's unfortunate wives. We also saw dungeons that supposedly held other spouses..."

The third and final stop on the tour was Nassau, in the Bahamas.

It was Good Friday.

All of the shops on the popular island were closed, and the only attraction was the straw market, a massive display of local wares made of seashells, fabric, wood, and straw. An afternoon shower added to the disappointment.

But with spirits undaunted, they boarded the boat and took off on the final leg of the journey, ending their seven-day tour back at Miami.

Luxury cruise

"The highlight for me was just cruising. I wanted to get away and relax," Haglund said.

The passengers said they were treated to such luxuries as midnight buffets, complete with exotic foods and ice carvings; seven-course meals; a selection of six different bands, including a fiddle player who had performed in Elko; trap shooting, messages and aerobic dancing.

"There was a casino on there, but of course none of us went to it," Berg said.

And it was a people-watcher's paradise.

"You wouldn't have felt uncomfortable no matter what you were wearing," Haglund observed. She wrote in her journal:

"With almost 2,000 people on board, watching fellow passengers became a daily amusement. Cruise outfits and swimwear on both genders surprised and entertained the viewer. String bikinis, plaid bermuda shorts, a T-shirt with eyelaashes, Hawaiian baggie-shirts-mumias, and Miami Vice pastels; everyone wore clothes to be comfortable in or to be noticed."

Other sights on board included occasional glimpses of flying fish, and spectacular views of the ocean.

"I loved watching the colors of the water. It changed with the weather and location — never the same. Pale green in Miami, angry dark gray by Cuba, turquoise and teal shades, bright and deep blues near the islands, the ocean constantly provided beauty," wrote Haglund.

NNCC tours

This was not the first art tour conducted through NNCC, and Campsey said it won't be the last.

She said the travel programs began with tours to Mexico in conjunction with San Francisco University.

After traveling to Mexico in 1983 and '84, she took groups to Hawaii and Europe in 1985.

In addition, she has taken small groups to many art attractions in San Francisco and Salt Lake City.

Campsey said she is in the process of organizing a tour of the Galapagos Islands at Christmas-time this year, and a trip to the western Caribbean next spring. Her plans even extend to 1988, when trips to England and other parts of Europe are planned.

"Pre-trip movies, lectures and discussions are a vital part of this program," Campsey explained. I want the travelers to know something of the art and how it relates to the culture of the places we visit.

"Whether it is a strange or unusual work of art or a decidedly different culture, if we can step back and look at its social context, its history or what is being communicated, then we have increased our knowledge."

College plans S.F. trip

A three-day college credit tour to San Francisco, sponsored by the art department at Northern Nevada Community College in Elko, is scheduled for June 15-18.

Barbara Tenney, director of the Winnemucca community college center, said the highlight of the tour will be a visit to DeYoung Museum to view the impressionism exhibit.

Tenney said other places to be visited are Golden Gate Park, Morrison Planetarium, Sarah Winchester Home in San Jose and St. Mary's Cathedral.

Two days prior to departure, a pre-tour lecture, complete with slides, will be given by Sarah Campsey, an art instructor with the community college.

Students receive one college credit for the tour, Tenney said.

The fee of $200 includes the college credit, motel for three nights, charter bus transportation and entry fee. Participants must pay for their own meals.

A $25 deposit is due by May 29. For information, call the college, 623-4824.

Mayor Corner proclaims 'Week of Young Child'

4-19-86

Several local organizations involved in education and child care are planning activities in connection with "The Week of the Young Child," proclaimed by Mayor George Corner.

The event is sponsored across the country by the National Association for the Education of Young Children.

A children's art display is featured through April at the Elko County Library, sponsored by the Elko Chapter of the Northern Nevada Association for the Education of Young Children.

In Wells, a day of movies, exhibits and art activities is planned for April 26 at Wells High School.

Happy Days Preschool plans a toy and clothes collection drive for needy children, as well as a Hop-a-thon for the muscular dystrophy association, reports Kathy Garamendi.

Little Britches Head Start Center of Elko will, according to director Shari Whipple, hold a car wash, raffle and baked goods sale at Ray's Chevron on April 24.

The Northern Nevada Community College Child Center will have a special Spring Sale April 21-25, reports Marilee Snyder. Individual class pictures of the children will be for sale, as well as children's books and teaching materials.

And Noah's Ark Preschool plans a car wash and arts and crafts day at the school on April 26, reports Vickie Churchfield.

Aging class

Stereotypes and attitudes toward aging parents will be the focus of "Understanding the Transitions of Aging Parents," a class being offered by the Northern Nevada Community College. The course is sponsored by the Elko County Women's Center.

Gerontologist Mollie Keller will teach the one-credit course that meets Thursdays, beginning Oct. 17, from 7 to 9 p.m. The course will analyze the aging individuals' independence, role changes, finances, recreation, family relationships and personal adjustments, according to Sandy Shelbourn.

Registration for the four-week course will take place at NNCC on Oct. 10 and 11. EDP Oct. 9, 1985

Seminar to offer tax tips for ranchers

3-17-86 EDP

Tax and investment advice for ranchers will be offered in a Northern Nevada Community College seminar set for 7-10 p.m. March 31 in Lundberg Hall, announces Louis Horton.

The seminar is co-sponsored by the NNCC agriculture department and the Nevada Small Business Development Center. Instructors will be local Certified Public Accountants Bob Heguy of Kafoury-Armstrong and Mark Paris of McMullen-McPhee. Topics include income tax strategies, the tax worksheet, special tax situations, social security taxes and benefits, estate taxes and full investment analysis.

The seminar is free and no registration is required. More information is available by calling Horton at the

NNCC program set tomorrow on glacial areas

EDFP J-2586
It's been a lot colder in these parts in past times, as Northern Nevada Community College Instructor Mike McFarlane will show with a slide program and lecture on Great Basin glaciers at noon tomorrow in Room 6 of Lundberg Hall.

The informal presentation is part of NNCC's Great Basin Lecture Series and will include material on Nevada's largest glacial area, the Ruby Mountains.

The lecture is open to the public and those attending are encouraged to bring a sack lunch.

NNCC slates astronomy show

EDFP 10-1785
Eric Easterly will conduct a slide show and discussion titled "Voyager I Encounters Saturn" at noon tomorrow in Room 6 of Northern Nevada Community College's Lundberg Hall, according to Sharron Racine.

Racine said Easterly is a local attorney and amateur stargazer who teaches astronomy at NNCC.

The presentation is the second of an astronomy series scheduled at the college. Those interested in attending are encouraged to bring brown-bag lunches.

College offering country swing, instrument classes

EDFP 4-12-86
Courses in country swing dancing and instrument flying will be offered later this month at the Northern Nevada Community College.

The dance class will be taught by Gary Prunty, college spokesman reported, and students will learn basic swing steps such as lariat, octopus, pretzel and the cotton-eyed Joe. Dates for the course are Friday, April 25, from 7 to 10 p.m. and April 26 from 9 a.m. to noon and 3 to 6 p.m. Class will be held at the fair-ground exhibit hall. Prunty reported the cost will be $15 and a partner is not required.

A basic introduction to instrument flying for private pilots wishing to upgrade their certificates or for instrument-rated pilots looking for a refresher will be offered beginning next Thursday and continuing on Thursdays for the next eight weeks.

Those wishing to sign up for the instrument class must do so on Monday or Tuesday of next week. The cost will be $105 for the three-credit course. In addition to the three-hour Thursday sessions, beginning at 7 p.m., instructor Rita Miller of El Aero Services will give simulator instruction on Saturdays.

Students can sign up for either class at the student services office in Lundberg Hall on the NNCC campus. More information on the classes can be obtained by contacting the college at 738-8493.

NNCC adds new mining classes starting next fall

By Coty D. Raposa-Floyd
There is no questioning the importance of mining and mineral exploration in Northeast Nevada.

Some of the nation's largest gold mines, barite mines and the largest mercury mine are located here.

But there has been a question on the availability of trained, local workers to staff these growing concerns.

And, for many, Northern Nevada Community College is providing the answer.

Just one year ago (1984-85) the school's first Geotechnical Science Program was initiated to train NNCC service area residents.

And, already, exciting changes are planned for the fledgling department; changes which reflect both the growth of the local mining industry, and their need for specialized workers.

According to NNCC instructor Mike McFarlane, a restructuring of the program will be put into place this fall. The new emphasis is reflected in the course's name change: from Geotechnical Science to Mining Technology.

Students pursuing a two-year Associate of Applied Science in Mining Technology degree will have a choice of three fields of specialization, in accordance with the industry's labor needs.

Areas from which a student may choose are Geotechnical, Metallurgical, and Engineering (A one-year certificate of achievement is also available.)

The reason for the restructuring to allow for specialization is basic. Jobs for Northeast Nevada residents who too often find themselves waiting at the mine's employment office door for two or three years, says McFarlane.

Now, he says, the two years can be well spent learning the skills of the trade, specializing in an area of interest, and then, commanding a quicker entry due to the training and the job-related work experience which is a part of the two-year program.

For students interested in the geological aspect of mining — the exploration, the surveying, the field work — the geotechnical emphasis can be selected for specialization.

The metallurgical specialty emphasizes the chemistry of the minerals and ores. Here, a student learns to work in area assay labs as part of his or her training. The college hopes to construct a mini-assay lab in the near future to further enhance the metallurgical training.

The student selecting the engineering emphasis of the mining technology program will discover the importance of the computer in today's mining industry.

Drafting, for example, is no longer the tedious task it once was. Instead, today's mining engineer makes use of computer-assisted drafting, with the computer making the complicated drawings. Cross-section maps with drill hole information, once the time-consuming bane of engineers, are now plotted in minutes, again, with the aid of a computer.

Today's mining field is both highly technological and competitive. Instructor and Mining Advisor McFarlane strongly believes NNCC is preparing students to hurdle these obstacles, and others, with confidence.

Galen Knutsen, senior mine geologist at Carlin Gold Mining Company, concurs.

"The mining industry is both highly competitive and relatively good paying. Those taking the mining program get a good return on their investment, and a foot in the door."

On the change of emphasis of the program Knutsen says, "The change of program from geotech to mining technology makes the student more attractive to a broader spectrum of employees. Previously, with a geotech background, they weren't necessarily attractive to the metallurgy or engineering departments. That will change."

Carlin Gold Mining Company is one area mine which encourages their employees to continue their education at NNCC.

Knutsen says the company finds those who do are more motivated in their work, have a higher degree of competency and pride in their performance, and generally are more responsible.

The mining technology program's one-year certificate of achievement is "particularly encouraging" says Knutsen, as it allows the full-time employee an obtainable goal.

McFarlane says he, too, is encouraged the restructuring and expansion of the program will attract more potential employers to his students who successfully complete the course.

McFarlane comes well qualified to instruct and oversee the program. He earned his Master's Degree in Geology at the Mackay School of Mines at the University of Nevada-Reno. He was employed by area mines for five years before accepting the challenge to organize the department at NNCC.

He's quite proud of the program; proud the administration is willing to work and refine the course to fit the needs of the students and the area mines where most will seek employment. He maintains his ties with local mining concerns so that his students will be aware of the latest trends in the industry. It was his awareness of the specialization emphasis in mining that led to the restructuring. That is the state of the art in the mining world, and that is what McFarlane wants for his students.

In addition to the course restructuring, the department will be moving to larger quarters at NNCC next year. This in anticipation of more area students who realize the way to the top of the mining world is with a one-year certificate of achievement, or better, an Associate of Applied Science/Mining Technology degree.

For more information on the program contact McFarlane at NNCC, 738-8493.

Next year the Geotechnical Science course of study at Northern Nevada Community College will be renamed Mining Technology, offering students a choice of three areas of specialization. Instructor Mike McFarlane, left, oversees students (from left) Brad Keyes, Rick Davis and Brent Womack, all of Elko, as they examine the formation of rocks.

NNCC sets Great Basin lecture

Northern Nevada Community College will begin its 1985-86 series of Great Basin Lectures at noon tomorrow in Room 18 of McMullen Hall, announces Charles Greenhaw, NNCC dean of instruction.

NNCC instructor Richard McCarty will present a program titled "Mormon City Building in the Southern Great Basin." The program is based on recent archaeological and historical research on an 1860s Mormon mission to the Muddy River Valley in southern Nevada. The mission was established to grow cotton for the LDS Church during the Civil War.

Greenhaw said McCarty, who has an extensive background in Great Basin Archaeology, will discuss the reasons why the Mormon communities were established, what they looked like, how they tried to sustain themselves and why they failed. The discussion also will include theological perceptions of the pioneer Mormons that conflicted with the Muddy River environment.

Greenhaw said the public is invited and encouraged to bring brown-bag lunches.

NNCC football coaching clinic set Saturday

Northern Nevada Community College's one-day Football Coaching Clinic at its Elko campus will be held on Saturday, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The clinic, sponsored by NNCC, will be conducted by Roger French, assistant coach and offensive coordinator at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah.

French has worked closely with BYU's head coach LaVell Edwards, who was named coach of the year in 1984 when the Cougars won the National Championship, and in the Elko clinic will be teaching strategies for offense, how to beef up a team's passing game and tips on how great quarterbacks are made.

The class is designed for high school and junior football league coaches, a college spokesman said, noting the cost for the one credit class is $20 and that the credit may be used toward teacher recertification.

Persons wishing more information about the clinic or early registration should contact Pat Warren, coordinator for NNCC's Continuing Education Division, at 738-4493, extension 231 before 2 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Ramses slide show planned

Northern Nevada Community College is offering a free Ramses II slide presentation Saturday at 7 p.m. in the Library Conference room.

The slide show is open to the general public, as well as the students who have signed up for the trip to Provo, Utah, March 14 and 15, to see the Ramses II collection. The presentation will show slides of several examples of the beautiful Egyptian artifacts on display in the collection.

Students who have signed up for the trip must attend the meeting in order to pay the ticket and motel fees and to make carpool arrangements.

Any persons who would still like to sign up for the trip may do so immediately after the presentation.

College Offers Classes

The fall schedule for the Northern Nevada Community College Extension Classes is out according to Eleanor Little, local coordinator. Eighteen courses are being offered including academic university credit classes as well as local interest classes.

NNCC and IFA set wool haul

Louis Horton, head of Northern Nevada Community College department of agriculture, has announced that NNCC in cooperation with Intermountain Farmer's Association will again haul wool to Utah where it has been sold to a Utah wool market.

Any woolgrower who wants to sell his product through the college can take it to the IFA loading dock from 8-5 on Wednesday, according to Daria Barkdall, IFA manager.

IFA will donate proceeds of the haul back to the college for its scholarship program, she added.

Hauling costs are five cents per pound of wool — to be paid by the sellers — according to Horton.

NNCC Geotechnical Program Is Expanding

ET 4/23/86

by COTY RAPOSA-FLOYD

As befits Northeast Nevada's involvement with the mining industry, the Northern Nevada Community College's geotechnical science program is both expanding and restructuring to facilitate future growth.

Only a year old (it was established in the fall of 1984) the program is adopting a name change and instituting a "specialization" course of study that one area mining official predicts will make the student "more attractive to a broader spectrum of employers."

In today's highly competitive mining field, that is very good news.

As of this fall geotech will be Mining Technology. Instructor and mining advisor Mike McFarlane says there is a trend in the mining industry toward specialization, and that's exactly what the restructuring of the course will allow his students to do. Select an area of specialization.

Students pursuing a two-year Associate of Applied Science in Mining Technology will have a choice of three fields of specialization, in accordance with the industry's labor needs.

The areas from which a student may choose for specialization are Geotechnical, Metallurgical and Engineering.

Also available is a one-year Certificate of Achievement.

For those students interested in the geology aspect of mining—the location, the surveying, the infield work—the geotechnical emphasis can be selected for specialization.

The student wishing to work with the chemistry of the minerals and ores will find the metallurgy emphasis more satisfying. This area of specialization includes work in the assay lab. NNCC hopes to construct its own mini-assay/lab in the near future. At present, students work in area labs.

The engineering-oriented student will now be able to concentrate his or her interests in that area. This particular course of study includes a lot of computer work, as this is the tool heavily used by mining engineers. The tedious cross-section maps and drillhole drafting charts are now plotted in minutes with the aid of the computer.

All three areas of specialization provide the same core subjects, but allow the student to diversify in order to specialize.

Will specialization aid the student in finding employment in area mines? There are, of course, no guarantees, but at least one area mine sees the change as positive from their point of view.

"The change of emphasis in the program from geotechnical to mining technology will make the student attractive to more departments within local mines, according to Galen Knutsen, senior mine geologist at Carlin Gold Mining Company.

"Previously, with a geotech background, they weren't necessarily attractive to the metallurgy or engineering departments. That will change," he predicted.

Knutsen says he considers the mining technology course a "good investment" allowing the student a foot in the door in the area's highly competitive market.

Carlin Gold Mining Company is one area firm which encourages its employees, at all levels, to seek further education at NNCC. Knutsen praised the Mining Technology one-year Certificate of Achievement, saying it allowed the full-time employee/part-time student an "obtainable goal."

McFarlane, too, feels the revamped two-year course of study will be of great benefit to many local residents who have found themselves waiting at a mine's employment office for two or three years.

Now, the two years can be well spent learning the skills of the trade and specializing in an area of interest. The Associate of Applied Science degree, and the on-the-job training that is a part of the program, will be attractive to the potential employer, and show the student's commitment to his career.

McFarlane earned his Master's Degree in Geology at the MacKay School of Mines at the University of Nevada-Reno. He was employed at area mines for five years before accepting the challenge to begin the Geotech program at NNCC.

McFarlane says persons with an interest and aptitude in basic science will particularly find this program appealing. The exact course work will vary with the selected specialty, but include such courses as computer programming, drafting, surveying, analytical techniques and computer assisted drafting.

NNCC sets Ramses trip

12-4-85

Professor Paul S. Hanna of Northern Nevada Community College has announced he will conduct a tour Saturday of the Ramses II exhibition at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah.

Hanna will guide members of his archeology and comparative religions class through the displays of ancient Egyptian artifacts. While teaching with the European Division of the University of Maryland, Hanna conducted several tours of the actual sites in Egypt and the Cairo Museum, from which the Ramses II exhibits originate.

Hanna said he has a few tickets still available for others who might wish to participate in the NNCC field trip. Admission to the museum is $4 per person.

For information on travel and motel arrangements, Hanna may be contacted at the college, 738-8493 (ext. 229) or at home, 738-8553, for further details.

Oriental massage class set

EDFP 1-24-86

Northern Nevada Community College has scheduled two workshops this weekend on Shiatsu, a form of oriental massage.

The classes will be taught by Jim Smith, a certified Shiatsu instructor from Reno.

Smith said Shiatsu is an increasingly popular form of oriental massage that utilizes the principles of acupuncture to improve circulation, promote relaxation and reduce stress and muscle tension.

Interested students may sign up in advance at the student services office or at the class. The fee for each one-credit class is $20.

The beginning Shiatsu class will be held Saturday from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m.. The advanced session will follow Sunday from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. Both sessions will be held in Rooms 6 and 7 in Lundberg Hall.

Smith advised students to wear loose-fitting clothing, and to bring a pillow and towel to class.

Oriental art talk Friday

EDFP 1-23-86

Art and architecture expert Dr. Nate Winters will give a lecture on the Orient at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at the Northern Nevada Community College library, according to NNCC art instructor Sarah Campsey.

Included in the presentation is a slide show and movie. The lecture is free and open to the public, she said. Winters is a member of the art department faculty at the University of Utah, and the author of several books on art and architecture.

One of the purposes of the lecture, Campsey said, is to prepare those who will participate in an NNCC "Grand Tour" of the Orient, June 18-July 8. There are 20 spaces available for the trip, which will tour Japan, Taipei and Hong Kong.

Winters has joined Campsey before on tours of Europe, Mexico, Hawaii and San Francisco, and will join her and tour director Loren Nebeker again for the Far East tour.

All three will be present at tomorrow's lecture, and will answer questions about the tour and about oriental art.

NNCC moves five classes to Grade

Ely Daily Times

9-17-85

Five classes being offered this fall by the Northern Nevada Community College will be held at the Ely Grade School instead of the high school, NNCC coordinator Peggy Hogan announced Friday.

Those classes are calligraphy, accounting, Shoshone, shorthand and photography.

Calligraphy will be held Monday in room 310 at Ely Grade School. Accounting will be Tuesday in room 310, Shoshone will be Tuesday in room 309, shorthand will be Wednesday in room 310 and photography will be Thursday in room 310. All other classes will be held as listed in the schedule of classes.

Friday is the very last day to register, Hogan said. About 120 signed up for classes this semester, she said. Many signed up for more than one class.

But it takes at least 10 to keep a class open, and some offerings fell below the grade. Classes canceled are business communication, applied economics, business law, typing I, advanced BASIC, European civilization, personal management, productivity through people, drafting 100, tone painting and basically beautiful.

Classes open include the Shoshone class, accounting, Typing II, shorthand, word processing, introduction to computers, introduction to programming, calligraphy, woodshop, photography and counseling and guidance.

All self-paced classes are open, too. High school students may sign up for classes, and can take academic subjects with permission of school authorities.

To register, students must visit the NNCC office at 612 Aultman between 8 a.m. and noon. The office phone is 289-3586.

Those who signed up for canceled classes are asked to contact NNCC for a refund or to change to another class. Classes cost $20 per credit.

Free comet flick

EDFP 3-23-86

Northern Nevada Community College is offering a free movie on Halley's Comet Saturday at 7 p.m. in the Library Conference room.

This movie is open to all interested persons, especially those who have signed up for the fieldtrip to the Harison Planetarium for the comet program there.

Adult education adds courses

New elective courses are being offered this fall through the adult education program, which is administered through the Humboldt County School District.

Adult education has been offered in the district since 1972. It is a state-funded program that allows individuals, ages 17 and above, to obtain a GED or a high school diploma or both. High school graduates are ineligible for the program.

Funding is based upon average daily attendance. This year the budget is approximately $20-25,000.

Assistant Superintendent Ken Lords, the coordinator of the adult education program, has hired two new part-time teachers this year for the program — the sole teachers for the program.

They are Edith McCombs and Kendyl Robinson. Both specialize in a particular field enabling them to offer new elective courses along with the required GED and high school courses.

McCombs will offer classes in consumer education, introduction to computers, agriculture, geometry and physics. Robinson will offer courses in biology, novels, environment and nutrition.

Required courses are U.S. Government, U.S. History, math, english, science and health.

McCombs is new to the district. She taught nine and one-half years in Washington and Idaho. Her counterpart, Robinson, has taught at the Winnemucca Junior High School for two years.

Both teachers are looking forward to the new school year. They say that it will be refreshing to teach students who choose to go to school as opposed to students who are required to go to school. "I'm excited with the fact that these people choose to be here," Robinson said.

Classes are held at the Northern Nevada Community College on Minor Street. The community college offers the space for the adult education program as a community service, said the former coordinator and teacher, Juanita Jeanney.

Jeanney moved to Reno recently and was in Winnemucca this week acquainting the new teachers with the resources that are available to the adult education program.

There is no set period of registration. A student can start the program at any time. One of the attractive features about adult education is that "it's an independent study" program, Robinson said.

In addition, the hours are flexible and it is free to those who did not complete high school. Students can take classes as refresher courses, too, without the intention of earning a GED or high school diploma.

When a student wants to enroll in the program, the district requests the individual's transcripts and they are reviewed by the teacher to determine what the person is lacking.

If a student has already received passing grades for certain high school courses, the credits are applied toward the high school diploma. For example, if a student lacked a year's worth of credits to graduate, an individualized program would be developed for that particular student.

Jeanney said that the adult education program is highly confidential so students need not be embarrassed. The classes, held at the community college, are flexible so students can come and go as they please.

The hours are from 1-5 p.m. on Mondays and Wednesdays, 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays. In the evenings, the teachers are available from 6-10 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

When students enroll in the adult education program, they are pretty nervous, Jeanney said. After all their "last experience wasn't the greatest."

Most of all, though, Jeanney finds the students to be "self-motivated" — a delightful quality teachers readily recognize in students.

Red Cross chairmen Mary Berg and Mary Harper hold painting and charity chart for the upcoming Bloodmobile Drive here in Elko. Challenges between several local businesses, civic organizations and public safety departments to find out which group can donate the most units of blood will highlight the drive. The painting was donated by area artist Della Johns and will be given away in a free drawing. The drive will be held at the Northern Nevada Community College in Lundberg Hall on Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 16 and 17. Hours on Monday are from 3 to 8 p.m. Tuesday hours will be from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. EGH nurses and Auxiliary will staff the event, and the public is urged to attend either day. Elko Ind. 9-11-85

NNCC slates stockhorse class this weekend

Former Snaffle Bit Futurity World Champion Gary Baummer is scheduled to present a two-day stockhorse training clinic at the Horse Palace this weekend to help local horsemen train and show their stockhorses, according to Pat Warren of Northern Nevada Community College. NNCC is sponsoring the 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. clinic this Saturday and Sunday.

Cutting horse trainer Tom Marvel of Battle Mountain said, "Gary is a great confidence builder."

Baummer, from Elk Grove, Calif., will cover proper lead changes, spins, and sliding stops. Students will have an opportunity to train their own horses on fresh cattle, and bring green-broke colts to finished cutting or reining horses.

There are still a limited number of openings for the Sunday clinic. The cost of the class is $35.00 per day.

Spectators are welcome and will be charged a $5.00 fee to help cover expenses.

Warren said anyone wanting more information should call her at the college at 738-8493.

NNCC Offers Business Seminar

The Nevada Small Business Development Center is offering a seminar for small business owners or prospective business owners on "Choosing the Legal Structure for Your Business."

The seminar is scheduled for Thursday evening, December 5 from 7-9 p.m. in Room 14 of McMullen Hall at Northern Nevada Community College.

Eric Easterly, a local attorney, will discuss the advantages and disadvantages of sole proprietorships, various partnership arrangements, and corporations. Other topics included will be the procedures and regulations for each form of business, the tax advantages and disadvantages of each, and the liabilities of owners and stockholders.

The seminar is free, and no registration is required. For more information, contact Valerie Easterly at the Nevada Small Business Development Center at 738-8493, extension 245.

Course offered

Elko Daily Times 5-2-86
A one-credit introductory course in field geology will be offered during the summer session at Northern Nevada Community College in Elko.

The course, Introduction to Geology (Geol. 105) will consist of five Saturday field trips in eastern Nevada to examine various geologic landscapes and geologic phenomena, including a trip to an operating gold or silver mine. Field procedures and rock and mineral identification will be discussed.

The instructor will be John Breilrick, a consulting geologist.

The cost will be $20 for one credit and a $20 lab fee will be charged for field materials.

Interested students can register for the course by calling John Breilrick at 283-6720 by Wednesday. Students can call over the weekend also.

This will be the only class offered by NNCC this summer, but the fall semester is being planned now. Anyone who wants to request a special class, or who would like to teach a class in the fall can call Peggy Hogan at 283-3589 from 8 a.m. - 12 p.m.

College offers noon hour fitness talks

Dumbbell Sun 2-17-86
Free health fitness seminars called "Mini Series for Nooners" are scheduled for March, said Barbara Tenney, director of Northern Nevada Community College.

The seminars will feature local professionals and will be held at the college on Minor Street from noon to 1 p.m.

On Friday, March 7, Bjorn Koeh, the city recreation director, will speak on "exercise and fitness." Then Nancy Heckel from Winnemucca Mental Health Center will talk about "stress management" and Dr. Jeffrey Lovett will give a presentation on "maintaining your health."

Tenney credits the former director, Rae Edwards, for the health seminar concept.

Just recently Tenney called the speakers and scheduled them for their talks. "I feel like it's a great community service" she said of those who are taking time away from their schedules to present the seminars at no charge.

Tenney said people are welcome to bring sack lunches.

Health Fair Scheduled for April 24

Elko Independent

April 1986

Approximately 600 people were screened in last year's Health Fair, and a large turnout is expected again this year when the Health Fair is held at the Elko Convention Center from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Sunday, April 21.

Site coordinator Bill Mann said the Health Fair consists of five major components: health education, health screening, counseling, referral and follow-up for abnormal findings.

Area health care providers are volunteering their time to provide screenings that include height and weight, blood pressure, anemia, vision, hearing, body fat analysis, review and blood chemistry.

All the screenings are free except for the blood chemistry analysis, which costs $10 and is designed to uncover possible abnormalities in 25 areas including kidney and liver functions, blood sugar, thyroid, potassium and iron levels.

For an additional $5 — or $15 total — participants may also have their blood sample tested to determine how much at risk they are to heart disease.

Mann noted that the normal cost for both tests is approximately $200.

If both tests are taken, the participants must have fasted for a minimum of 12 hours. If only the blood chemistry analysis is done, a minimum of eight hours' fasting is required. Fasting means no food or drink other than water, explained Mann.

He added that only one blood sample is needed for both tests.

Screenings are for those 18 and older.

Those attending do not need to make appointments. Mann said the screening is on a first-come, first-served basis except that consideration will be given to people who, because of age or physical condition, may become BLOOD DRIVE — Charles Cross of Elko gets a helping hand from one of the head nurses, Elaine Merrill of Salt Lake City, as he becomes the first local resident to donate blood in this week's Red Cross Bloodmobile drive. The drive, held Monday and Tuesday at the Northern Nevada Community College, drew 229 donors according to local blood bank chairman Dr. George Manilla. He noted, however, that the goal of the drive was 300 donors. The drive was conducted with the help of the Elko General Hospital nurses and nursing students from NNCC, EGH Auxiliary members and members of Soroptimists and Beta Sigma Phi (staff photo by Mark Lenz).

NNCC Announces Spring Ag. Courses

Elko Independent 12-15-85
Northern Nevada Community College announced this week that continuing education courses in agriculture will be offered during the college's spring semester.

Boyd Spratling, DVM, will offer a class entitled "Herd Health" on five Monday evenings during the semester.

A course in rancher's basic troubleshooting and minor repair for heavy equipment will be taught Sat., Feb. 8, by field service mechanic Emmett Warren.

Water is a precious resource in Nevada's high desert country, and Mike Buschelman of Chilton Engineering will offer a course in water rights on five Tuesday evenings this spring.

"Training the Stockhorse," instructed by Gary Baummer, 1984 Snaffle Bit-Futurity World Champion, will be of interest to area horsemen. The class is set for April.

Registration for NNCC's spring semester is set for Jan. 16 and 17 and classes will begin Jan. 20. For further information, phone the student services office at the college, 738-8493.

Blood Draw Tomorrow, Friday

By DICK SNYDER
A blood bank visit will be held at Northern Nevada Community College in Elko on May 29-30, announces Dr. George Manilla, local blood bank chairman. Manilla noted this is the first blood bank visit in Elko by Intermountain Health Care Blood Services, which has replaced Red Cross as the supplier of blood for Elko General Hospital. Red Cross notified local officials earlier this year that it was ending its blood supply program in the Intermountain District, which is headquartered in Salt Lake City. Manilla said he investigated several alternatives and finally recommended IHC, which is affiliated with LDS Hospital in Salt Lake City.

"This blood drawing will be the same as previous drawings," said Manilla. "The same local volunteers will be working. The only difference is the truck won't say 'Red Cross' any more."

The blood drawing will be held from 3 to 8 p.m. on Thursday, May 29, and from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Friday, May 30.

Mary Berg and Mary Harper are serving as co-chairmen of the volunteer effort for the hospital auxiliary. They report that refreshments will once again be donated by Soroptimists and Beta Sigma Phi.

"There is always a very great need for blood," said Manilla. "We hope that Elkoans will continue to support the blood bank and give the gift of life, blood."

The public is invited to a general membership meeting of the American Heart Assn. at 7 p.m. Wednesday, May 28, in the Elko General hospital board room.

Heart Assn. spokesman Terry Armstrong said the local unit of the Heart Assn. is attempting to create a northeastern Nevada unit which would be affiliated with the state organization.

"Everyone with an interest in the Heart Assn. is encouraged to attend the May 28 meeting," said Armstrong, who is director of nursing at EGH.

Major item of business for the evening is election of officers and a board of directors. Serving on the nominating committee are Armstrong and Page Blackstock of the hospital and Jan Miles of Nevada Home Health Services.

Pictured are Valerie Easterly, left, head of Small Business Management at Northern Nevada Community College, and Penny Urriola, owner of the Eleventh Street Book Store. The two will give a seminar entitled "How to Start Your Own Business" at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 4, at the Elko County Library. The seminar is sponsored by Elko County Women's Center and is free to the public.

NNCC Offers Tour of Europe This Sunday

A special opportunity to escape the snow and cold weather will be offered this Sunday at NNCC when the "armchair tour bureau" will be presenting a trip to Europe. With him will be Loren Nebeker, a travel specialist from Salt Lake City.

This slide presentation and discussion will be an introduction to the two-week tour of Europe which is being planned from June 12 to July 4, sponsored through the art department at NNCC.

The cost of the trip, which includes air fare and hotel accommodations as well as a cruise on the Rhine River in Germany, will cost $1995 per person round trip from Elko.

Four tour guides will be accompanying the Elko group, including three professors from the University of Utah and Sarah Campsey, chairman of the art department at NNCC.

Dr. Nate Winters, a professor in the University of Utah art department and one of the tour guides, will be the main speaker at the "armchair tour" next Sunday.

With him will be Loren Nebeker, a travel specialist from Salt Lake City.

The slide presentation and the upcoming European tour will show points of interest in Germany, Italy, France, Austria, Switzerland, Holland and England.

Sarah Campsey urged anyone interested in Europe to attend the slide presentation, whether or not they are considering the actual tour.

"This will be a great weekend getaway," she said. "Come and enjoy the program."

The "armchair tour" will begin at 1 p.m. in the NNCC library, and refreshments will be served.

Summer field trips EDFP 5-26-86 for credit at NNCC

Field trips for credit are to be offered at Northern Nevada Community College during the coming summer session, according to the college's summer schedule.

Two credits in biology may be earned in a course taught by Mark Ports about the natural history of the Ruby Marshes. Two weekend field trips are scheduled for June 22-23 and July 26-27. Camping and vigorous field work will be required of students who will live-trap and identify small mammals, do some bird watching and plant identification. In addition, evening lectures are scheduled for June 24 and July 26 at NNCC.

"Wildflowers of the Ruby Mountains", a course in the identification of flora, will be taught by botanist Linda Peck July 17, 7-9 p.m. On Saturday, July 19, students will make a day-long trip to the mountains.

The date has not yet been set for a Saturday field trip entitled "Geology of Elko County" to be conducted by Mike McFarlane. Some of the activities include: fossil collecting, viewing glacial features of the Rubies and panning for garnets, which were thought to be rubies by early settlers.

Students will be able to attend performances of Midsummer Night's Dream, Julius Caesar and Timon of Athens during a field trip to the Shakespeare Festival in Cedar City, Utah. The college van leaves at 6:00 a.m. Friday, August 1. Free workshops on costuming, make-up and acting will be added features of the course. It is to be taught by David Loughney.

Further information may be obtained from the NNCC Student Services Office at 738-8493.

Lecture on oriental art EDFP 1-11-86 scheduled at college

Art and architecture expert Dr. Nate Winters will give a lecture on the Orient, accompanied by a movie and slide show, at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Jan. 24 at Northern Nevada Community College, according to NNCC art instructor Sarah Campsey.

Winters is a member of the art department faculty at the University of Utah. His latest book, Architecture is Elementary, focuses on recognizing world styles of architecture, and the concepts of those styles.

One of the purposes of the lecture, Campsey said, is to prepare those who will participate in an NNCC "Grand Tour" of the Orient June 18-July 8. There are 20 spaces available on that tour, which will cover Japan, Taipei and Hong Kong.

Campsey said she likes to "acquaint the group with the cultural, historic, and artistic aspects of the experience" before departure.

Winters has joined Campsey before on tours of Europe, Mexico, Hawaii and San Francisco, and will again join her and tour director Loren Nebeker. All three will be present at the Jan. 24 lecture to answer questions about the tour, and Winters' book will be available for purchase.

NNCC cutting clinic EDFP 7/21/86 with Bill Alexander

Former Elko High School agriculture teacher Bill Alexander, who now lives in Hico, Texas, will be conducting a cutting horse clinic August 3 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Bear ranch arena east of Elko.

In addition to being a highly respected National Cutting Horse Association judge, Alexander has placed horses in the NCHA Open Top Ten; the prestigious National Cutting Horse Futurity in Fort Worth, Texas; the Gold and Silver Stakes and the Breeder's Cup. He trained and showed the 1985 World Appaloosa Junior Cutting Horse Champion.

Alexander moved to the Winecup ranch with his family when he was six years old, attended the University of Nevada Reno and then taught agriculture at Elko High School before moving back to Texas. His three children, Bill, Chad and Kimberly, live in Lamolite.

Alexander is especially interested in non-pro and junior riders, helping them to breed and show as well as to ride cutting horses.

The clinic schedule will include "reverse psychology" — a method of starting and training cutting horses, use of the round pen, how to hold herd and turn back and proper herdwork techniques.

Sponsored by Northern Nevada Community College, the clinic costs $45 per rider which includes the cattle charge. Spectator fee is $10, according to Pat Warren, continuing education coordinator for the college.

Experienced cutters on finished horses and students using ranch horses are encouraged to attend, Warren said, adding that participants should sign up by July 30 at NNCC.

More information is available at 738-8493 or 738-8625.

Women's Center Offers Courses

Two courses and a divorce support group are being offered in October by the Elko County Women's Center, according to an announcement from the organization.

A course entitled "Assertive Communication Skills" is being offered by the center beginning on Oct. 8. Instructors for the classes are Lisa Galindo and Cathy Arnold of Elko who received their training at the Phoenix Institute in Salt Lake City.

The six-week course will focus on developing effective communication skills in dealing with others. Topics to be covered include non verbal communication, assertion vs. aggression, saying "no," power language, listening skills and the "inner process" of assertion.

Arnold and Galindo said the course would be useful for those who deal with the public in businesses and community groups, as well as persons who would like to be more assertive in their day-to-day lives.

The classes will be held in room 2 of Lundberg Hall at Northern Nevada Community College, beginning at 7 p.m. Fee for the course is $45, which includes a text-workbook.

Child care will be available at the college by contacting Marilee Snyder at the Childhood Development Facility, 738-8493. Further information about the course is available by contacting Galindo at 738-5574, or Arnold at 738-4818.

On Oct. 15, the center is offering an informal discussion focusing on the "Older Sibling Welcoming the New Baby." Registered Nurse Marie Cook will be the speaker for the evening, and will be showing a film entitled "Nicholas and the New Baby." The film will be followed by a question and answer period aimed at how an older brother or sister can share in the involvement of a new arrival. Parents are welcome to bring their children to view the film, and there is no charge for the program, which is set for 7 p.m. at the Elko County Library.

Further information can be obtained by contacting Cook at 738-8939.

The center is also sponsoring a Divorce Support Group, open to both men and women. The first meeting of the group is scheduled for Oct. 8 at 7 p.m. For more information on the group, and the meeting location, phone 738-6369 or 738-8524.

NNCC business center sets legal seminar

Northern Nevada Community College's Small Business Development Center is scheduled to conduct a seminar called "Choosing the Legal Structure for Your Business," according to center director Valerie Easterly.

It is scheduled for 7-9 p.m. Thursday in room 14 of McMullen Hall at NNCC.

The seminar will be conducted by Elko attorney Eric Easterly, who will discuss the pros and cons of sole proprietorships, various partnership arrangements and corporations. Other topics are procedures and regulations involved in each type of ownership setup, as well as taxes and liability.

The seminar is free and no registration is required. More information is available by contacting Valerie Easterly at the center, 738-8493 extension 245.

Reinstated NNCC remedial classes set to start Monday

Reinstated remedial reading and math classes will start Monday at Northern Nevada Community College, announces the NNCC Student Services Office.

The classes earlier had been cancelled because there were too few registrants. However, a student services spokesman said today, the cancellation prompted many calls requesting the courses, so the classes were rescheduled.

The intensive, individualized program offers students an extra boost with the basics for school work in the fall, NNCC explains. Instructor Renda Andreozzi will offer three two-week sessions during the summer, using games and activities to reinforce math and reading skills for elementary school students.

The Kid's College Program also has some openings left in the August "Computers for Kids" class, offered to junior high students.

"Cajun Cooking," to be taught July 2 from 6-10 p.m. also has openings, as does the cutting horse clinic to be taught by Bill Alexander on August 3 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Spring Creek Horse Palace.

Times for the remedial classes or further information is available by calling student services at 738-8493.

NORTHERN NEVADA COMMUNITY COLLEGE

February 21, 1986

LAST DAY FOR SPRING ALTERNATE REGISTRATION! If the coming of Spring fills you with wanderlust, NNCC has the answer for you -- field trips for credit! Take a three-day jaunt in April to the Quinn Canyon Range of Central Nevada for an interdisciplinary natural history trip...or go birdwatching in the Basin and Range (Nevada has more than 400 species of birds!). Head to the Orient - Japan, Taipei, Hong Kong . These are just a few examples of Spring Alternate Courses Available, and there's plenty for stay-at-homers, too! Learn it all - from sports massage to Principles of Macroeconomics, right here at NNCC. Check it out, and register til 5 p.m. today!!

CONFUSED ABOUT COMPUTERS? Today and tomorrow R and L Data Systems, in cooperation with NNCC and the Nevada Small Business Development Center, are holding an informative Open House in Room 6 and 7 of Lundberg Hall. Just look for the life-size Charlie Chaplin poster. Come and browse...they don't bite!

IT'S BEEN A LOT COLDER IN THESE PARTS as NNCC instructor Mike McFarlane will show you this Wednesday, Feb. 26. As part of the Great Basin Series McFarlane will show slides of glacial areas, including Nevada's largest glaciated region - the Ruby Mountains. Bring a bag lunch at noon to Lundberg Hall, Rooms 6 & 7.

WORDS OF THANKS from NNCC's Dean of Instruction, Charles Greenhaw:

"Thanks to all of you who worked on the Cowboy Poetry Gathering - Karen, Cyd, Sarah, Meg and Meg, Louis, Tara, Mike and others. The Gathering was an intense period, full of life, fun. Can we do it once more?"

"Thanks to all of you who gave to Debbie Giles, whose abode, and all her belongings, went up in flame. You gave mightily and silently. You're what humans should be."

THE NEXT ISSUE OF THE ROUND TABLE, due out next week, has a special feature on Debbie and her reaction to her loss and the great outpouring of love from the college and the community.

WE'RE LOOKING FOR YOU, and your talents for upcoming issues of our student newspaper, The Round Table. Writers, poets, artists, don't be shy. Drop off your work for consideration at the Student Services office c/o The Round Table. We're also open to article suggestions.

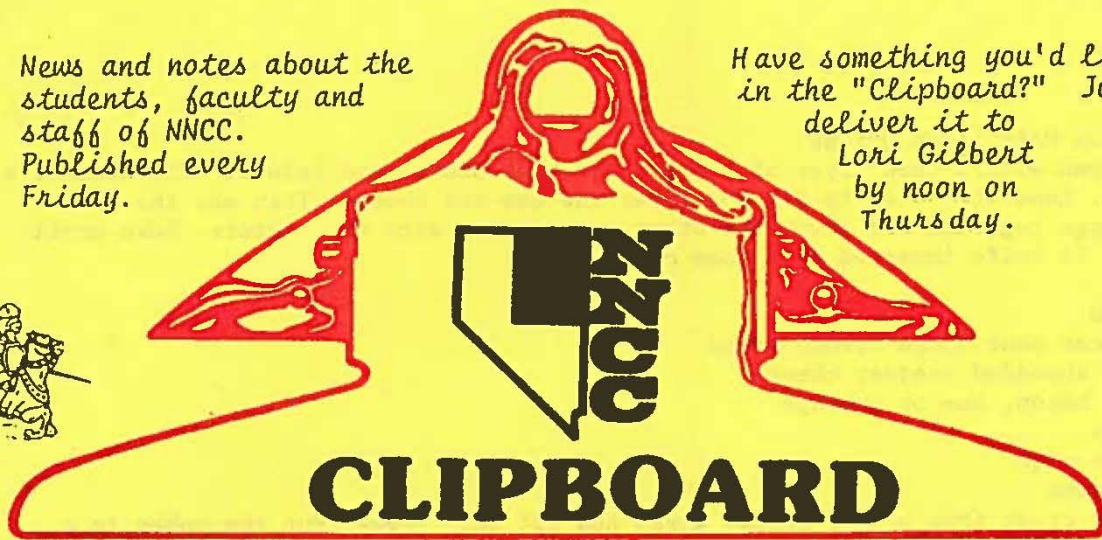

NEW SCHOLARSHIP is available from the Elko Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi to any female student planning to attend a 4-year college or University in the Fall of '86. Selection is based on scholastic achievement and financial need. Applications are available in Financial Aid until March 31.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1986

WELCOME SHANNON ROSE EASTERLY!

A daughter was born to Valerie and Eric Easterly, Thursday, February 27, 1986. Shannon Rose Easterly arrived at 1:20 pm weighing 6 lbs. 12½ ounces and 19" long (or tall!). Congratulations Val! We hope to see you and new family member soon!

WHILE WE'RE ON THE SUBJECT...

Did you know NNCC's Child Care Center has a "pet baby"?! That's how student Michael Green referred to the son of Janet Petersen recently. It seems, Janet, who assists in the center one day a week and brings 10-month-old Matthew along, overheard Michael asking his mom if when they had finished meeting pet baby bunny Buttercotch they could visit with the pet baby Matthew!

THE VALENTINE BREAKFAST WAS TERRIFIC WASN'T IT? For those of you who helped yourselves to seconds and still were'nt satisfied...here are the recipes:

HASH BROWN QUICHE - (REAL men enjoy this!)

1 pkg. frozen hash browns
5-6 eggs (beaten)
2-3 cups milk (enough to cover ingredients) shredded cheddar cheese (2-3 cups)
1½ cups diced ham or sausage or bacon

OPTIONAL INGREDIENTS:

swiss cheese onions chili's mushrooms

TO COOK HASH BROWN QUICHE:

Line pan with a thin layer of butter. Add hash browns and bake at 425 until it's brown. Lower the heat to 350 and layer the ham and cheese. Then add the milk and eggs together and cover the other ingredients with the mixture. Bake until done. (A knife inserted will come out clean.)

BRUNCH

8 slices sour dough french bread
½ lb. shredded cheddar cheese
1 lb. bacon, ham or sausage
8 eggs
3 cups milk
mushrooms

Remove crust from bread. Butter bread and cut into cubes. Put the cubes in a 2½ qt. casserole dish or 8½ x 13 greased pan. Sprinkle cheese over bread and layer meat over top of that. Add mushrooms. Beat eggs and milk together and pour over mixture. (Extra eggs and milk can be added to create more servings.) Let this combination stand overnight in the refrigerator. Bake at 350 for 50 minutes. If the recipe is doubled it takes twice as long to bake. Ready to serve when knife inserted comes out clean.

GRADUATION!

May 19 is not far off for those of you who plan to graduate this year. A Graduation Committee is now being formed and seven more members are needed. The Committee is responsible for graduation ceremonies, design of graduation announcements and selection of a guest speaker. If you are graduating in 1986 and would like to serve on this panel and get in on the planning, stop by Student Services and leave your name for Carolyn Owen.

FREE CONCERT SUNDAY...

The University of Nevada-Reno Wind Ensemble will give a special performance in Elko Sunday, March 2 at 7:00 pm at the Elko Convention Center. The 50 member ensemble will perform under the direction of Mack McGrannahan and cake and punch will be served at intermission.

THERE ARE SOME REAL ANIMALS OUT THERE!!

...and Steve Foree of the Nevada Division of Wildlife will tell you about them Wednesday, March 5, at noon as the Great Basin Lecture Series continues with "Big Game Animals in the Ruby and the East Humboldt Mountains."

Reserved Seating Available Now for the April 3 performance of the National Shakespeare Company "MERCHANT OF VENICE". At only $4 a piece buy your tickets now at the NNCC Business Office, Blohm Jewelers or the Elko Civic Auditorium.

INVEST TIME...GET $$$

"FLOWERS SO REAL YOU CAN PRACTICALLY SMELL THEIR SCENT..."

So remarked one student viewing the LRC's current exhibit. Part-time NNCC student Lou Hay is the artist and creator of such scenes ranging from serene to action-packed. Stop by and enjoy this versatile painter's work sure to please all tastes. Hurry...before it's too late!

PLANS FOR YOU WEDNESDAY include the noon lecture series on the Great Basin. This week featuring, "Big Game animals in the Ruby and Humboldt Mountains." This series is proving to be very popular so if you haven't caught one yet bring your lunch to LH 6-7 and enjoy!

FUNAROO FOR THE FAMILY in the form of a carnival sponsored by The Elko General Hospital Auxiliary at the Elko Convention Center TODAY from 4-9. Play video games or Bingo, enter raffles and eat a variety of foods from baked goodies to Mexican dishes. All this and more at this the third annual "Funaroo."

NNCC DOESN'T HAVE FOOTBALL OR BASKETBALL...

But we do have one terrific, 1st-rate VICA (Vocational and Industrial Clubs of America) Club and they'll be in competition HERE Thursday, March 20, from 8 am til noon. Automotive students statewide will participate in this event and you're invited to cheer them on and welcome them to the NNCC campus.

IT WON'T BE LONG NOW ... THE WEE LEPRECHANS WILL MAKE THEIR APPEARANCE AT NNCC FOR SAINT PATRICK'S DAY! Besides the fun of the day, a special noon hour concert is expected to add excitement. Internationally renowned concert pianist, George Rosenberg, and that flaming red-haired soprano, Lynne Rubel will entertain and lead students in a St. Patrick's Day Sing-A-Long.

WITH JUST ONE LOOK AT YOUR FACE... Karen Martin's Sociology Class is studying photographs of students' faces to determine which image is preferred - a regular photo or one of a mirror image. Their work is on display in McMullen Hall and you're invited to cast your vote in choosing which face you prefer out of the two.

FOOSBALL FANS UNITE! Wendy Windham says spectators are surely welcome at next weeks Foosball Tournament, Mon - Fri at noon in the Student Lounge.

DEADLINE FOR 1986-87 SCHOLARSHIP APPLICATIONS IS MARCH 31, 1986!! Stop by the Financial Aid Office and apply now. With $30,000 in a variety of scholarships available you can't afford not to give it a try. You'll never know unless you try!

TICKETS WON'T LAST LONG so pick yours up today for reserved seating for the April 3 performance of "The Merchant of Venice." Enjoy the talent of the National Shakespeare Company for only $4 a ticket. Purchase tickets at the NNCC Business Office, Blohm Jewelers or The Elko Civic Auditorium.

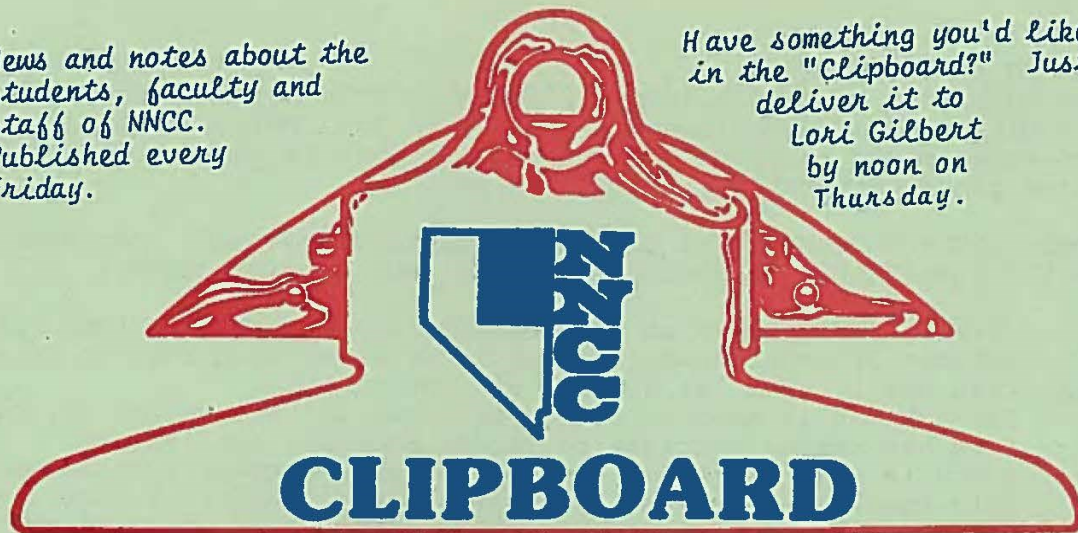

NEED HELP FILLING OUT YOUR TAX RETURN? The Volunteer Income Tax Assistance program will assist you. Just bring tax forms and other pertinent information to the Elko County Library, Wednesday, March 12 between 1-8 pm.

PAY RAISES TOP PRIORITY FOR NEVADA BOARD OF REGENTS

The University of Nevada Board of Regents won't get any definite figures until May on what the school will propose for salary increases. But the Regents yesterday tentatively agreed pay raises for faculty and other professionals will be the top priority in building the new budget. Gordon Gochnour of Las Vegas, Chairman of a Compensation Committee, said it is recommending the school reach the average salary in a survey of 77 national land grant or other major state universities within four years. But so far nobody can tell what those figures are until all the information is gathered.

THERE'S NO SUCH THING AS A FREE LUNCH...Oh, yes there is! Free corned beef and cabbage will be served at 12:45 after the Irish Sing-A-Long in the LRC at noon Monday, March 17. Don't miss the drawing for $25 either (students only). Come, sing, eat and get rich.

 There's also such a thing as a free breakfast. ASB is providing Easter breakfast in the Student Lounge, Thursday, March 20, beginning at 7:30 a.m. Come early, eat well and visit with your fellow students before Spring Break.

DEADLINE FOR 1986-87 SCHOLARSHIP APPLICATIONS IS MARCH 31, 1986. STOP BY THE FINANCIAL AID OFFICE TODAY!

COMING UP THURSDAY....

The NNCC VICA club is holding it's Heavy Duty Equipment contest at the Diesel Building on campus from 8am to 3pm. This competition enables Diesel students to place a first place winner to compete with other first place winners from across the nation.

Currently displayed at the Learning Resource Center(LRC), is an exhibit from Taichung, Taiwan. These items were brought to us from Chen Hwa-Ling (Lola) Barney, student at NNCC. The exhibit is made up of her personal belongings and especially from her recent marriage to former student, Brad Barney. There is also a display case filled with authentic items such as knic knacs, jewelry, slippers, tea server, and many more items. All these items will be on display through the month of March only.

SEMINAR FOR RANCHERS OFFERED...

NNCC Agriculture Department and the Nevada Small Business Development Center are co-sponsoring a seminar on "Tax Advice and Investment Analysis for Ranchers" on March 31, 7-10 pm in Room 6/7 of Lundberg Hall. The seminar will be taught by local CPAs Bob Heguy of Kafoury-Armstrong, and Mark Paris of McMullen McPhee. Topics will include income tax management strategies, the tax worksheet, special tax situations, social security taxes and benefits, estate taxes, and full investment analysis. The seminar is FREE of charge and no registration is required. For more information contact Louis Horton, NNCC, 738-8493, extension 214.

THE CHILD CARE CENTER WILL BE CLOSED THURSDAY AND FRIDAY...

Parent-Teacher conferences will be held in the center next Monday thru Friday and Marilee Snyder will be able to cover for the teachers for all the days except for Thursday, March 20 and Friday, March 21.

ATTENTION: EMERGENCY MEDICAL PERSONNEL -

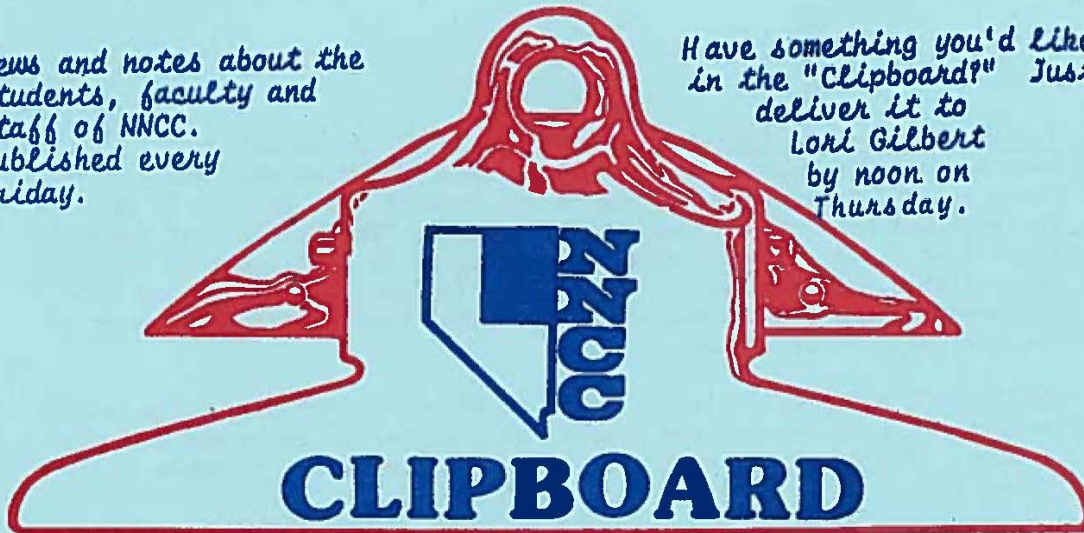

A 1-day radiological seminar for emergency medical personnel will be held March 16 and repeated March 17 and 18 from 8 am til 5 pm daily. There is NO FEE and continuing education units will be provided for those completing the 8-hour session. While the seminar is designed primarily for emergency medical personnel, it is open to the public. For registration and more information contact Kathy Jaynes, director of personnel at Elko General Hospital.

STATE VICA COMPETITION TODAY! Good Luck NNCC Diesel Students !!!!

Six students are competing today in the State VICA competition/diesel division held in the Diesel Lab from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Spectators can watch the team in action, according to diesel instructor Brett Murphy. Competing in the 10 divisions are Dan Ahern, Lupe Mancha, Paul Snooks, Mike Shields, Alex Gomez and Kevin Reed. The winner will advance to the National VICA/Diesel Contest to be held in Phoenix this June. The VICA/Automotive contest will be held in Carson City April 8 & 9.

No Need To Check Your Calendar! Normally THE CLIPBOARD is published on Friday, but TODAY, Thursday, is event-filled! And besides, we wanted to catch you all before you left for Spring Break...and let you know what's coming up after vacation...so read on, read on.

EASTER BREAKFAST TODAY. If you're reading this early enough you may still have time to enjoy the free breakfast this morning in the Student Lounge. Today's eye-opener is brought to you by your A.S.B.

'Tis No Blarney - the St. Patrick's Day corned beef and cabbage feed on Monday was THE BEST! Thanks to the staff of NNCC who cooked ALL the food, and served it to us with a smile. You don't find that kind of service just anywhere. The Irish Sing-Along was fun and well-attended. Student Judy Emerson won the $25 drawing. Your A.S.B. fees paid for the food.

If You're Missing the Pitter-Patter of Little Feet it's because the Child Care Center is not in session today or Friday due to parent conferences. Like us, they shall return Monday, March 31.

You've Heard of the Oscars, but have you heard of the National Association of Campus Activities MAJOR PERFORMANCE AWARD? Well, there is one given, and last year's winner will soon be here in ELKO. The National Shakespeare Company will present "The Merchant of Venice" April 3 at 7 p.m. The tickets are a steal at $4, and reserved seating is available, but ACT FAST! Buy yours (and a friend's) at the NNCC Business Office, Blohm Jewelers, or the Elko Civic Auditorium, where the play will be presented.

NNCC's OPEN HOUSE will also be going on Thursday, April 3. High School students will be touring the campus, so remember to smile and put them at ease. The Community will also be invited to tour the campus later in the day.

Money! Have We Got the Money! Or rather, the Financial Aid Office does, and lots of it, all ready for you. The "Catch"? Only one. You've got to apply. Deadline for the 1986-87 scholarship applications is Monday, March 31, so stop by the Financial Aid Office and let Joan Nivens show you how easy it could be to share the cost of college. No matter what may be your interest, chances are there's a scholarship for you.

LOOKING AHEAD National Library Week is April 6 through 12. The NNCC Learning Resources Center will be celebrating with several contests and give-aways, and will end the festive week with their annual PAPER AIRPLANE CONTEST. So, practice those designs over vacation, and look for more information on upcoming events!

Looking for Something? The Learning Resources Center has had several items turned in recently. Items include a watch, glasses, a calculator and several keys. If you think these might be yours, stop in and identify the item(s).

LRC Limited Vacation Hours. If you've got some studying to do during Spring Break, or would just like to curl up with a good book or two, the LRC will be open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. March 24 through 28.

Limited Number of Openings are still available for the NNCC-sponsored Gary Baummer Stockhorse Training Clinic Saturday and Sunday, April 5 & 6 at the Spring Creek Horse Palace. Contact Pat Warren, ext. 231.

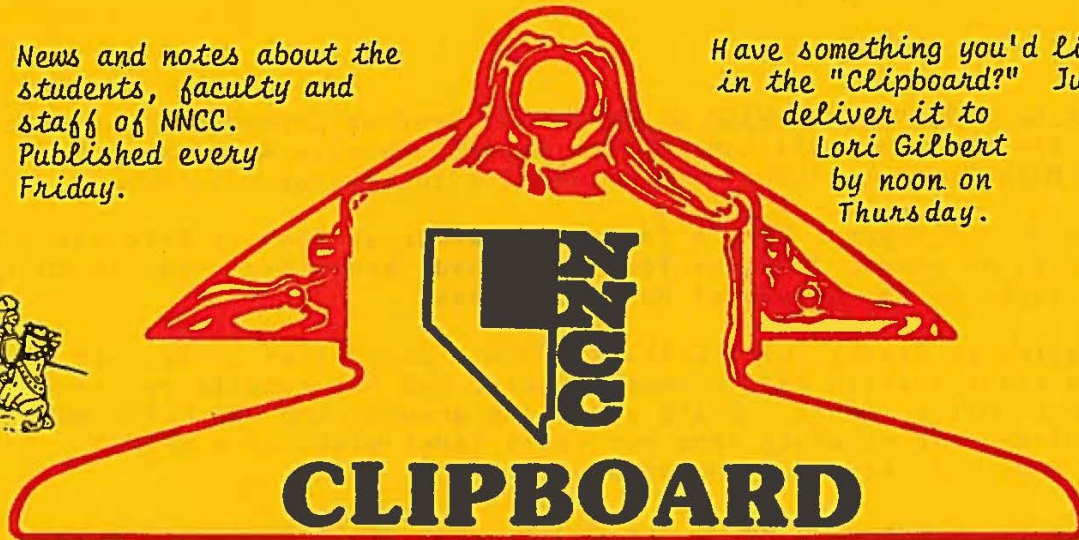

Take a Break--You've Earned It! The Clipboard Staff hopes every student and staff member has a very enjoyable, exciting and/or relaxed Spring Break. Come back refreshed and ready to roll into the final months of the academic year!

National Library Week
April 6-12, 1986

American Library Association

Next Week is National Library Week and your Learning Resources Center has planned some great contests and special exhibits, as usual. Tony LaMorte's Wood shop class will display some handcrafted items, and the UNR art show "Nevada's Irrepressible Art" will line the walls. Contests include a "Who Am I?" guessing game, a "Guess How Many" test of skill, and the annual favorite..The Great Paper Airplane Contest held at noon on Friday. Get the details at the LRC. There's lots of great prizes to be awarded!

Thursday's Open House was a success with over 150 high school students from seven high schools touring the campus prior to the Merchant of Venice performance. There was a lot of community and college effort involved in advertising the successful production. Elko residents Donald and Grace Erskine, resplendent in Shakespearean costume, toured the city and campus as walking promotions for the event.

Good Luck Automotive VICA Students who head to Carson City next week for the State competition: Keith Rubert, Charlie Wade, Dan Ahern and Mike Shields, along with automotive instructor Mike Morse.

Eyes On The Stars Elko's favorite amateur astronomer Eric Easterly will be on campus Thursday for a noon hour brown bag event in LH 6/7. The topic is the return of Halley's Comet.

Speaking of Stars...Lori Gilbert, NNCC's journalism instructor and area radio station KRJC's News Director had her tonsils removed this week in Boise, Idaho. She's squeaking around, and the CLIPBOARD staff and her students (and her radio fans) wish her a SPEEDY and complete recovery. We miss you!

Since We're Speaking About the Staff...Ike Cress announces a baby shower and luncheon for Val and (Baby) Shannon Easterly April 10 at noon in Room 16 of MH. Val is with NNCC's Small Business Development.

Need a Clean Car for Spring? You'll like this! The Headstart Program is holding a Car Wash Saturday, April 12 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Ray's Chevron on East Idaho. $5.00 cleans your car inside and out.

It's Never Too Soon to apply for scholarships and financial aid, reminds Theresa Murphy. Come on in and prepare your funds for 86-87.

Search those Drawers and closets for these (and other) items needed by our Child Care Center: duct tape, stickers, yarn, Q-tips, egg cartons, fabric scraps. All are needed for Create-A-Craft Day, April 19. The Center is participating with the Elko County Women's Center for this day of crafts. More info contact Merilee Snyder.

Spectators are Welcome at tomorrow's Gary Baummer Stockhorse Training Clinic to be held at the Spring Creek Horse Palace. NNCC is sponsoring the event. The admission price is $5 to help cover costs.

Public Radio in Elko? That's the hopes of some. A committee is being organized to bring National Public Radio to the area. If you'd like to help, or wish more information contact Joyce Shaw, LH, Room 3 between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m.

NATIONAL LIBRARY WEEK at NNCC goes out today with a Bang, not a whimper. At NOON in the LRC is the Great Paper Airplane Contest with competition in three areas. If you've never attended, be there TODAY! All other contest winners will be announced following the paper airplane competition.

WHILE YOU'RE IN THE LRC... cast an admiring glance at the beautiful handcrafted items made by Tony LaMorte's advanced woodworking class. The furniture will be on display through May 1.

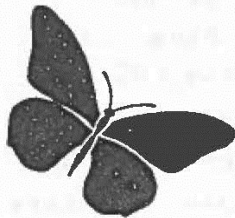

GOLD, SILVER AND BRONZE...medals, not metals. That's what the NNCC VICA automotive and diesel students brought home from the State competition in Carson City Thursday. Student Keith Rubert won 1st place (Post Secondary) in Automotive, and third in state for Job Interview. Dan Ahern won first place in Post-Secondary diesel competition, and second in Job Interview. Mike Shields took First Place in Job Interview and second in Diesel .

Lupe Mancha took third in diesel mechanics. Way to go VICA!!

GRADUATING THIS MAY?? Have we got information for you!! First, Student Services needs you to come in for your gown fitting. NOW! Secondly, a very special photo package has been arranged for you (and you alone) at Inkley's Photo. All you need to do is get your magnificent self down to Inkleys with $14 and receive four 5 x 7 's for yourself, with Inkleys donating another one for the college to use as wanted posters. Oops, for graduation articles. Last, but not least, Thursday, April 17 and Thursday, April 24 at 12:45 the Round Table newspaper photographer Rich DiGiammo will be taking some informal group photos in the Student Lounge area. The photos will appear in the Graduation Issue.

NO DOUBT YOU'VE BEEN WONDERING...when the NNCC Orchestra would present their Spring Concert. It's been decided! Mark your calendars for Wednesday, May 14 at the Presbyterian Church, Elko.

THE GREAT BASIN LECTURE SERIES, which has proved so popular this year, concludes Wednesday, April 14 when Mark Ports presents "Butterflies and Other Insects in Northern Nevada. The informal lecture is held in rooms 6/7 of Lundberg Hall at noon. Bring your lunch and learn more about our area.

YOUR COMMENTS ARE NEEDED By Gail Trounday, presently doing a program review of the Child Care Center. She's especially interested in input from past and present preschool workers. Contact C.C.C.

MANIC MONDAY MOVIE A.K.A. Campus nooners movie is this Monday at noon, LH/6&7. Title: "The Power of Positive Reinforcement".

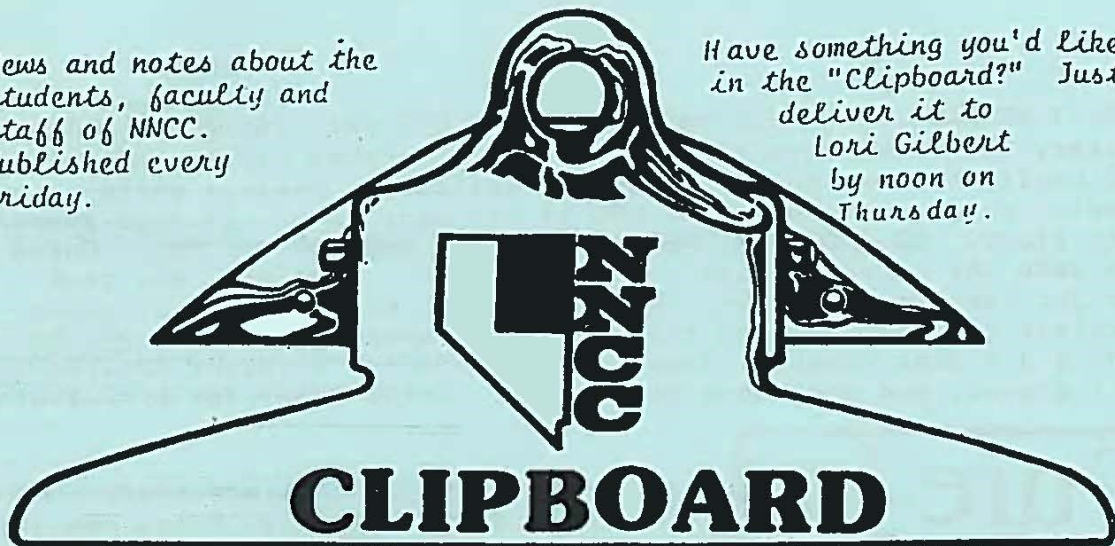

A NEW AUTHOR AMONG US is Carl Diekhans, NNCC math and computer instructor. His book: Business BASIC. The Round Table will give you the whole scoop in the next issue due out next week!

INTERESTED IN A CAREER IN MEDICINE?

If so, the University of Nevada School of Medicine is interested in you! Tuesday, at 10:30 a.m. in room 20 of McMullen Hall a representative will be here to answer your questions and explain more about the school's admission requirements.

THROW AWAY YOUR CALORIE CHARTS...the goodies are coming! The 1986 graduating class is sponsoring a BAKE SALE Wednesday, April 23, in McMullen Hall. Proceeds to toward purchasing a class gift for the college. So, eat hearty!

MARS...The Red Planet... Is it as mysterious as Orson Wells and science fiction writers would have you to believe? Find out for yourself when astronomer Eric Easterly presents a slide/lecture on Mars and the Mars Viking Lander. It's this Thursday, 12 noon in Room 6/7 of Lundberg Hall. Bring a lunch and bring a friend!!

DIDN'T WE HAVE FUN...during last week's LRC celebration of National Library Week! Winners of the "Who Am I" contest were Connie Hicks and Leslie Felton, both of whom won Walkmans! Mystery photo identities are posted in the LRC if you want to see if your guesses were close. SO, HOW MANY PENNIES WERE IN THE JAR? 1,205. Guess who made the correct guess? PENNY Johnson. (Really!) She took the jar home as her prize. Kevin Mariluch won the longest paper airplane flight time, and the accuracy competition..winning a back pack and a disc camera. Tracy Wooden Konakis' airplane covered the most ground, and she won a clock radio...real handy for a newlywed.

Pure Joy

For NNCC's single parents and their offspring. Seems the local Pizza Hut is attempting to qualify for the "World's Fastest Pizza Making Contest", and expect to have about 21 hot pizzas ready-to-eat about 8:30; and single parents and their kids can come eat for free. The event is in cooperation with the Single Parents Center and Pizza Hut manager Bob Enslinger, so come and eat Monday night, and have fun with your kiddos!

NEW ITEMS FOR SALE...outside the Child Care Center next week! The sale is in conjunction with the Week of the Young Child.

RANCHERS...a seminar to help you with legal matters will be held Monday night from 7-10 p.m. in Lundberg Hall, Room 6/7. Co-sponsored by the Nevada Small Business Development Center and NNCC, it's free.

VISITORS ON CAMPUS next week will be members of the Elko Order of Soroptimists, Intl. They'll attend a lunch hosted by the NNCC Foundation, according to director Ginger Rackley, and hear a program from Georgia Hensley and Val Easterly on their departments. Then, a tour of our campus. Soroptimists provide great scholarships to NNCC yearly, so give them a warm welcome.

In the April Round Table "Speak Out" Wendy Windham was quoted as saying, "An unlimited budget? That's heaven!" Wendy says she didn't say anything about heaven in her interview. We regret the error. Wendy's photo was also inadvertently interchanged with Lisa Hyde's.

BORROW A CUP OR SPOON FROM THE STUDENT LOUNGE LATELY? According to Maxine Palmer the vending machines are run by an independent business-woman who operates on a slim margin; so if you're not buying, don't use, ok? Remember comments can be sent to the Round Table newspaper.

FRIDAY, APRIL 25, 1986

A Compensation Committee says salaries of professors in the University of Nevada system lag about ten-percent behind the nation's average and the same holds true in a survey of 52 Community Colleges. The average salary on the Reno and Las Vegas campuses is about thirty-four thousand and about twenty-eight thousand for faculty at Clark County and Truckee Meadows Community Colleges...Recommendations were presented yesterday at a meeting on salaries for the next two years, and Gordon Gouchnour, Chairman of the committee, says the proposed package would be about an eighteen-percent raise total including a ten percent boost in July 1987, cost of living increase in July 1988 and the Merit Pay that was started in 1985. If approved, this would place Nevada's schools in the middle of the pack.

AND THE CASH FLOWS ON...

The Nevada Board of Examiners has voted to release $4 million to pay part of an expected five percent pay raise for about ten-thousand state and university employees. The State Budget Director says he's confident workers will be entitled to the full five percent because of the Consumer Price Index being up and an excess of cash in the State Treasury. Once the March figures are in the raise will take effect July 1, 1986.

NNCC FACULTY READIES "THE BEEF" FOR ANNUAL SOFTBALL CHALLENGE...

Undefeated super-slow-pitch pitcher, Charles Greenhaw, announced this week he'll be retiring from active play after this year's game. Of course, he'll still be undefeated. (Hopefully.)

Tendonitis is forcing the retirement and Greenhaw expects to go only three innings but remarked, "However, if accupressure really works I can probably go on for nine more years."

Also retiring from active play after this year's game is "Hawkeye" Karen Martin. Greenhaw attributes his undefeated career, in part, to Hawkeye's superior abilities as an umpire.

She's retiring because she'll be on sabbatical next year and also because she doesn't see as well as she used to, according to Greenhaw. Greenhaw says, "I don't know how many years we've won; must be 10 or 12! We intend to quit on top though!"

O.K. STUDENTS, HOW ARE YOU GOING TO MEET THIS CHALLENGE?!

You've worked hard all semester so now you've earned the chance to compete in goat milking! That's right, next Friday at the Spring Barbeque sponsored by the ASB there will be calf-roping and goat milking competition as well as the presentation of awards. The new ASB officers will be introduced and the Faculty-Student Softball Game is set for 6 PM. (The Faculty does expect to win, again.) Anyone interested in being on one these teams should contact Tony Salvatierra. C'mon students, nows your chance to display some real softball talent.. (Grind the Faculty into the ground!!!)

ADULT LEARNING CENTER PARTICIPANTS TO BE HONORED NOON WEDNESDAY

Charles Borden, Director of Adult Education for the Elko County School District, will be the featured speaker at the pot luck award ceremony in the Adult Learning Center, May 7, at noon.

Instructor, Jackie Banghart says there will be both high school and adult recognition at the ceremony.

$300,000 MADE AVAILABLE AT UNLU FOR COMMUNITY COLLEGE VALEDICTORIANS

UNLU President, Robert Maxson, has announced a new scholarship that will be offered to Community College students who plan to continue their education at the University.

The John H. Midby-Daniel F. Byron Scholarship will be offered to students who have completed two years at the community college level with a straight A average. Recipients will receive $3,000 for the additional two years of study at UNLU that will be required for them to obtain a bachelor's degree.

AND I PROMISE ROOT BEER IN ALL THE WATER FOUNTAINS...

Studentbody election campaigning continues through Tuesday, May 6. Candidates will give speeches at noon on the campus with elections to begin Wednesday May 7-8. The results of the elections will be announced at the Spring Barbeque, Friday.

COME RAIN OR SHINE...THE CELEBRATION WILL GO ON!!

The NNCC Spring Barbeque gets cookin' at 2PM today, (weather permitting), outdoors behind the LRC. The fun includes contests of cow or goat milking and calf haltering. If it does rain, or becomes too cold, ASB Officers assure the good food and festivities will continue indoors in the Student Lounge and ALC. Awards will be made at 5:30 as well as announcement of the new student body officers. At 6 it's the annual softball game between the faculty and staff against the students. (Remember students, finals are Next week!) Grab your friends and anyone you'd like to see attend NNCC next fall.

DUAL ACCOMPLISHMENTS FOR LEE MILES THIS MONTH!

Child Care Center teacher, Lee Miles, gave birth to a 7lb. 4oz. son Wednesday, May 7th. The child, named Daniel, kept mom and dad (Ron Sipko) waiting but they aren't complaining. Daniel is the couple's first child. Lee, with a master's degree in Behavior Modification, is scheduled to receive an associate degree in Early Childhood Education at NNCC Graduation ceremonies May 19. Congratulations on both, Lee!

The LEARNING RESOURCES CENTER will close at 5:00 p.m. Wednesday, May 14th;
Thursday, May 15th; and Friday, May 16th.

Speaking of the BIG DAY...

Graduation, May 19, and those grads will look spiffy this year in freshly cleaned and pressed gowns. Seems, graduating student Richard Adkins (Round Table April feature) convinced Vogue Cleaners, (175 Fifth St.) to clean and press the gowns at no charge. Our hats (and caps!) are off to Vogue owner, Jim Meeks, for his donation of services for the 75 gowns. NNCC students and faculty will remember your generosity.

HAVE YOU SEEN THE NNCC ART DEPARTMENT'S SPRING SEMESTER ART SHOW? It's one of the largest in recent history, with a wide variety of mediums featured. Also, have some fun with the Visual Analogies Contest. Take some time for a good look!

SPRING BRINGS SUNSHINE, SUMMER FUN AND MUSIC!

The NNCC Community Orchestra will present their Spring Concert, Wednesday, May 14, at the First Presbyterian Church, 1559 Sewell Dr. in Elko (next to Northside Elementary.) There's no charge but donations will be accepted for the NNCC "Piano Fund."

Wait 'til you see the Graduation '86 issue of the ROUND TABLE!! Your guide to the commencement program includes poetry by NNCC students, everything you ever wanted to know about Dr. William Berg, tales of an NNCC teacher headed north to Alaska (and points beyond!) and much more! As always, the Round Table is free...circulate it among your friends and relatives!

FAMILY LIFE RESOURCES AND ISSUES:

The topic of discussion for NNCC Single Parent Center Director, Georgia Hemsley, when she addresses a special Mother's Day program, Sunday, at the First Presbyterian Church. Joined by Cynthia Smith of the Elko County Women's Center, Georgia will emphasize the resources available to traditional and single families. The programs' at 9AM.

The Elko School of Nursing will celebrate its 30th year of providing Licensed Practical Nurses, and later, Registered Nurses for Northeastern Nevada, with a two-day reunion and celebration tomorrow and Saturday.

According to Mary Berg, a former LPN graduate, reunion committee member, and wife of Dr. William Berg, the program will begin Friday at 3 p.m. with a tour of the NNCC nursing facilities, Elko General Hospital, and the Northeastern Nevada Museum.

At 6 p.m. the group will convene upstairs at the Stockmen's Motor Hotel for their opening session.

Registration will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday, and continue until 10:30 a.m. A continental breakfast will be offered.

The day's activities will begin with an opening speech from Delna Day, an Elko School of Nursing instructor for 17 years, and one of those responsible for bringing the R.N. program to Elko.

The State Superintendent of Public Instruction Gene Paolov, will then address the group.

At 11 a.m. a nostalgic "Remember When" panel made up of Drs. Manilla, Read, Hood, Moren and Delna Day will recall the nursing school's early struggles and successes. NNCC Dean of Instruction Dr. Charles Greenhaw will serve as moderator.

The group will recess at noon till 1:30 for lunch.

At 1:30 Dr. Hugh Collett will present the Keynote Address. Dr. Collett, now retired, was the School of Nursing's first commencement speaker.

The remainder of the after noon program will include "Student's Funny Experiences While in Nursing School" led by Della Johns and entertainment by the NNCC College Singers.

General Hospital to become director of nursing, then went on to become supervisor of health occupations, the Vocational-Technical Branch of the Nevada Department of Education. She also was president of the Nevada Nurses Association, and was an officeholder in many national and state professional organizations.

Another Elko General Hospital Registered Nurse, Mary Rang, taught for two years after Clevenger, and graduated 18 LPN's, half of whom went to work at the local hospital — exactly what the doctors had ordered.

Local enthusiasm ran high, but the school's third instructor was hesitant when approached to teach.

"I'm a nurse, not a teacher," she told the Nevada Vocational Education Department representative. She proved she was both.

She was Delna Day, a name synonymous with nursing to many in northeastern Nevada. She taught at the Elko School of Nursing for 17 years, graduating more than 100 LPN's — nurses, who for the most part, worked in rural communities. She saw the program through many trials — makeshift classrooms in aging school buildings, shared space with other departments at Elko General Hospital and limited facilities.

In 1968, the program became part of the Northern Nevada Community College curriculum, one of the first practical nursing programs in the nation to move into a community college system.

Day was also instrumental in bringing the registered nurse program to NNCC in 1978. Along with community college administrators, local citizens and area medical personnel, she repeatedly petitioned the University of Nevada Board of Regents and the State Board of Nursing. It was a hard battle, but it, too, was won with the community again supplying the first year's operating budget.

For Day, it was a bittersweet victory for it meant she would pass the mantle to another instructor who had more advanced degrees.

A citywide appreciation dinner honored Day's retirement. Introduced that eve-

The evening session will start at 5:30 with a no-host cocktail hour in the Stockmen's banquet room, followed by dinner. The evening program will include the introduction of alumnus and a fashion show of changes in nurses uniforms in the 20th Century.

Reservations can be made by phoning Alice Horton at Northern Nevada Community College, 738-8493.

ning was a new instructor, Patti Crookham, and the program's new instructor-coordinator, Georgeanna Smith, one of Day's former students who had continued her nursing training, earning bachelor's and master's degrees.

Heading the program today is Ruth Holland, who holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Cincinnati and a master's degree from the University of Utah. She has been the Nursing Program Coordinator since 1981.

Today's nursing program at NNCC graduates eight LPN's and 12 RN's yearly.

NNCC Graduates Nurses

by PATTI CROOKHAM
Special to the Independent

Eight practical nursing students will graduate Thursday, July 17, from Northern Nevada Community College. The students completed the program's 11-month course that included classes in psychology, nutrition, anatomy, English, child development and physiology, plus special classes in nursing.

The graduation exercise begins at 7 p.m. in NNCC's Learning

Resource Center in McMullen Hall. Nurses graduating are Anthony Alvarez, Janice Bailey, Sandy Brennecke, Cindy Green, Kimberly Minniear, Elli Ray, Sheral Schall and Gayle Wallace.

Terry Armstrong, R.N., an NNCC graduate and Director of Nurses at Elko General Hospital, will be the guest speaker on Thursday. Chris Cothrun will provide musical entertainment. A reception will follow in the student lounge. The public is invited and admission is free.

After graduation, the students may work as practical nurses until October when they take State Board licensing exams. Those who pass will be certified as licensed practical nurses (LPN's) by the Nevada State Board of Nursing.

school's early struggles and successes. NNCC Dean of Instruction Dr. Charles Greenhaw will serve as moderator.

The group will recess at noon til 1:30 for lunch on their own.

At 1:30 Dr. Hugh Collett will present the keynote address. Dr. Collett, now retired, was the School of Nursing's first commencement speaker.

The remainder of the afternoon program will include "Student's Funny Experience While in Nursing School," led by Della Jones; and entertainment by the (NNCC) College Singers.

The evening session begins at 5:30 with a no-host cocktail hour in the Stockmen's banquet room, followed by dinner. The evening program includes the introduction of alumnus by classes, and a Fashion Show of Changes in Nurses Uniforms in the 20th Century.

Mrs. Berg said Saturday dinner reservations are still being accepted, but should be made soon. Anyone wishing to attend the banquet are welcome to attend. Reservations made by phoning Alice Horton at Northern Nevada Community College, 738-8493.

It is not yet known if the school's first director, Margriet Clevenger, will be able to attend.

celebrating 30th year

Northern Nevada Community College's School of Nursing will hold a celebration marking the beginning of its 30 year this Friday and Saturday, according to a program brochure provided by the school.

Friday's activities begin with a motor tour of Elko. Vans leave the Stockmen's Motor Hotel at 3 p.m. and will make stops at Northeastern Nevada Museum, Elko Convention Center, Elko General Hospital and Northern Nevada Community College. The excursion concludes at 6 p.m. at the Stockmen's for a no-host cocktail hour.

Saturday's session is to be held in the upstairs meeting room at Stockmen's. Registration and a continental breakfast is scheduled from 9 a.m. until 10:30 a.m., with a welcome from NNCC Emeritus and former nursing instructor Delna Day.

Dr. Eugene Paslov, Nevada Superintendent of Public Instruction, is scheduled to speak at 10:35 a.m. "Remember When: Some Interesting Moments in Doctoring and Nursing" featuring Delna Day and Elko physicians Jake Read, Les Moren, Tom Hood and George Manilla.

Following an on-your-own noontime lunch, the program resumes at 1 p.m. with the keynote address by Dr. Hugh Collett, M.D., a longtime member of the NNCC advisory board.

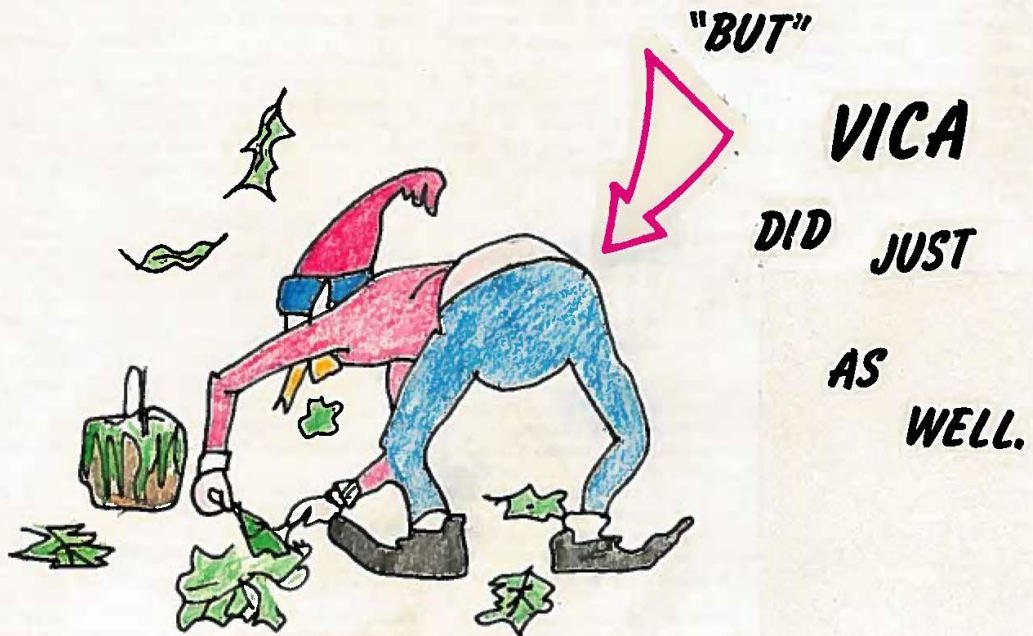

From 2-2:15 p.m., Della Johns will recall funny experiences of student nurses in a presentation titled "Nurses Have Fun, Too."

The College Singers, directed by Ken Brooks, are scheduled at 2:30 p.m. to perform selections from "Americana."

Happy hour begins at 5:30 p.m. in the Stockmen's showroom with no-host cocktails until 6:30, when the anniversary banquet will be served. The dinner program includes an introduction of the nursing school's instructors and guests; introduction of alumni by classes, and remarks from Mary Berg, R.N.

Also slated are a talk by Ginger Rackley, executive director of the

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

NNCC schedules livestock, equipment sale on May 31

A dispersal sale of all animals and agriculture equipment belonging to the Northern Nevada Community College is scheduled at the Elko County Fairgrounds Saturday, May 31. According to Louis Horton, head of the NNCC department of agriculture, Jake Reed, auctioneer, is scheduled to begin selling at 4 p.m. following the Elko High School Rodeo.

Forty head of registered Hereford and Angus cattle, 23 Suffolk sheep and miscellaneous equipment including four electric hog waterers, livestock scales, steel panels, P.T.O. baler, gooseneck trailer and 12 spools of barbed wire are listed among the sale items in a catalog which now is available.

The biggest spender at the auction will win a purebred Hereford cow-and-calf pair which was given to the college by Lee Livestock Company of Lamaille four years ago. Since then, Horton said, she has produced a good calf every year and has become a favorite, being the only cow to earn a name — Greenhorn.

"We could sell her," said Horton, "but we prefer that she help someone build a good herd."

Horton said he and his students hate to part with the animals — especially the cattle of which everyone is exceedingly proud.

"I went out and personally selected these animals five years ago," explains Horton. "They're cattle that are used to being worked with, and I know they will make good 4-H and FFA projects. If they all get to good homes — that's my goal," he added.

Complete sale information is available at 732-8433.

NNCC students win state VICA contests

Keith Rubert and Dan Ahern of Northern Nevada Community College took first place honors at the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America (VICA) Nevada State Skills Contest, held April 8-9 in Carson City.

Both now advance to the organization's national competition, scheduled for June in Phoenix, Ariz.

Ahern, state VICA president, won a first place medal for diesel engine skill, and a second place for job interview skill.

Rubert, vice president of the NNCC VICA chapter, took a first place medal in the automotive category, and a third place for job interview skill.

Mike Shields, chapter president and state vice-president, took a second-place medal for diesel and a first place for job interview.

Lupe Mancha took third place honors for diesel skill.

Rubert and Ahern also received a tool chest and tools valued at $300 from the Snap-On Corporation. Rubert's travel expenses to the national contest will be paid for by the General Motors Corporation and Ahern's expenses will be borne by Mack Truck Corporation. Those companies also will pay the expenses of instructors Mike Morse and Bret Murphy.

Four NNCC students won honors this month at the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America skills contest in Carson City, and two now will proceed to the national finals in Phoenix. Shown here from left are Mike Morse, NNCC instructor and VICA advisor; Keith Rubert and Dan Ahern, who both will go to the finals; Lupe Mancha; Mike Shields; and Bret Murphy, VICA club advisor.

Cattle, farm gear to be sold in Elko

ELKO — The Northern Nevada Community College agriculture program this fall will change curriculum, and shift from maintaining its own livestock herds to working with area ranches.

With the change a complete dispersal sale will be held Saturday, May 31 at the Elko County Fairgrounds, at 4 p.m., following the Elko High School Rodeo.

Agriculture Department head Louis Horton, said "everything must be sold." That includes 40 head of registered Hereford and Angus cattle, 23 head of Suffolk sheep, and miscellaneous equipment, including four electric hog waterers, livestock scales, steel panels, a P.T.O. bailer, 12 spools of barbed wire, and more.

To sweeten the sale, the department will give away a registered Hereford cow and heifer calf to the person who is the auction's biggest spender. There is no minimum bid on any items of animal.

Another special farm friend will be given away: a nine-month-old Great Pyrenees puppy. The college is accepting essays until May-29, with the winner awarded the nearly full-grown, but friendly dog.

The college started its animal farm five years ago. The ag department maintained two facilities — a 12-acre pasture adjacent to the college campus, which held the sheep, and a 500-acre leased parcel east of town on which the cattle grazed. The agriculture students were trained on-the-job, with farm chores as much a part of their homework as book study.

With the department's new emphasis, that will change. Like farms nationwide, the department will be placing more of an emphasis on agribusiness.

Further information on the dispersal sale may be obtained by calling 738-8493.

Changes For NNCC Ag Dept.

85 4/21/86
The Agriculture Department at Northern Nevada Community College will be undergoing some curriculum changes this fall, according to department head Louis Horton.

Horton said the shift in emphasis will see the college moving from maintaining its own livestock herds to working with area ranches. Accompanying the change will be a dispersal sale of the college's equipment and livestock.

The sale is set for Saturday, May 31, at the Elko County Fairgrounds and will begin at 4 p.m., following the Elko High School Rodeo.

"Everything must be sold," Horton said, and that includes 40 head of registered Angus and Hereford cattle and 23 head of Suffolk sheep. Miscellaneous equipment, from spools of barbed wire to electric hog-waterers, will also go on the block.

To "sweeten" the sale, Horton said, the department will give away a registered Hereford cow and heifer calf to the biggest spender at the auction. "We would sell her," Horton said, "but we would prefer she help someone build their herd."

Also to be given away is a nine-month-old Pyrenees puppy. The dog will be awarded to the winner of a college-sponsored essay contest.

The NNCC Agriculture Department started its own animal farm five years ago, maintaining two facilities—a 12-acre pasture for the sheep, adjacent to the college, and a 500-acre parcel east of town on which the cattle grazed.

Students received on-the-job training, with farm chores as much a part of homework as book studies.

But, like such programs nationwide, the college's new emphasis will be on agri-business. Keeping up with the times will mean studies in economics, and even computer assistance in farm production. Students will now get their hands-on experience at local ranches and natural resources agencies.

Horton said it is difficult for him and his students to part with the animals. The cattle, especially, are a source of pride for the department head.

WANT TO WIN A PUPPY?

As part of their dispersal sale, the agriculture department at NNCC is giving away a nine-month-old Great Pyrenees puppy.

The winner of the dog is the person who writes the best essay. The contest runs through May 29. All entries must be turned into Alice Horton at the college.

The rules are simple: Write what you know about the Great Pyrenees breed, why you'd like to own the dog, and where you plan to keep it.

All entries become the property of the college, and the decision of the contest judges is final.

For more information, contact Louis Horton at the college, 738-8493.

NNCC proud of its automotive technology

Northern Nevada Community College has always been proud of its outstanding automotive and diesel technology programs, and with good reason.

But now, it's twice as proud.

This Fall was the inception of NNCC's 2-year Associate Degree in Applied Science, available in automotive technology or diesel technology.

Students completing the two years of study will not only obtain additional, practical hands-on experience, but will graduate with a valuable Associate Degree in their chosen field.

And that degree can mean the difference between a foot in the door and an open door, according to automotive instructor Michael Morse and diesel instructor Bret Murphy.

"The one-year course is still a very good year of study," explains Murphy. "But, with the extra year, the extra time, the student gets the practical experience they need in the real world."

Automotive department head Mike Morse agrees.

"The second year is when the student really gets down to the nuts and bolts," he said, no pun intended.

"To an employer the automotive or diesel graduate with an Associate Degree in Applied Science shows their sincerity. It proves the student has the ability, and the discipline needed to do the job." Morse also believes the Associate Degree better prepares the student to advance up the business or corporate ladder.

Both instructors predict the Associate Degree in Applied Science in automotive or diesel technology will produce a journeyman level graduate. Not a mechanic, but a technician, prepared to handle the increasingly sophisticated advances in both automotive and diesel engines.

And these instructors know of what they speak. Both have experience in the business scene as well as in education.

Automotive Advances

Automotive department head, Mike Morse, is in his third year at NNCC. He's an energetic, enthusiastic 28-year-old who believes his students deserve training on state-of-the-art equipment, and exposure to a variety of automotive professionals.

And he gets them both.

Received recently is the college's first computerized diagnostic engine analyzer, a necessity for testing late-model, computer-equipped vehicles, according to Morse.

"We stay up with the trends in order to make this facility one of the best in the state," he boasts, nodding proudly toward student Keith Rubert, at work at an engine across the shop. Rubert, of Elko, last year won first place in the State Vocational Industrial Clubs of America (VICA) automotive division. A state winner in NNCC's first year of competition.

Professionals, like those from the Ford Motor Corporation, provide periodic on-campus training sessions, presenting the latest automotive repair methods for both students and Ford-authorized mechanics. Morse's goal is to convince General Motors and the Chrysler Corporation to present similar training sessions.

"Micro-processors, fuel injection, turbo chargers and more have alot of older mechanics wanting to throw in the towel. These factory-approved sessions benefit both the experienced mechanics and my students. And, with all our advanced equipment, it's a natural to host the sessions here," he said.

Community Courses

Morse also likes sharing his shop, and expertise, with his community, and does so by scheduling various mini-courses.

One such favorite 5-week course is aptly titled "Consumer Mechanics", and teaches men and women the basics of car care. No one knows too little to take this course which covers such basics as changing an air filter and various systems in your car. Morse noted this particular course is an excellent one for women who wish to be better acquainted with their vehicle's maintenance and upkeep.

Small engine repair, motorcycle maintenance and basic welding are other 5-to-15 week (1-3 credits) courses offered to men and women.

Area residents are encouraged to phone for further information and course dates.

Top Diesel Training

The diesel technology department is also keeping step with the march of technological progress, and in this department such progress doesn't come cheap.

The University of Nevada Board of Regents last fall approved a grant for a $30,000 Dynamometer, the only heavy-duty Dynamometer in Northern Nevada. The complicated piece of machinery tests the entire diesel truck system, under actual operating conditions. In the modern world of diesel, there's nothing like it, and that suits diesel department head Bret Murphy just fine.

"Dyno brings the practical experience to the student, gives them the very latest and best training, and that gives them an edge!"

Murphy hopes Northern Nevada diesel owners will take advantage of the department's acquisition in exchange for donations of equipment for students.

NNCC Diesel Elite

Murphy's students are members of an elite class, they are members of the ONLY heavy-duty technology training program in Nevada. One reason is the high cost of the equipment. A diesel engine, just the engine, can run $40,000. The NNCC diesel shop room is full of engines and all in working condition. This isn't always the case, according to Murphy.

"Lots of diesel programs across the country use junk engines for training, engines that don't run. That can be real discouraging for the student. Our students tear down an engine and put it back in running condition. That's a real learning experience," he says proudly.

Due to the cost of the equipment, community donations are sought, and appreciatively received. Among past donors are Round Mountain Mine, Pioneer Equipment of Salt Lake City, Cashman Equipment of Elko, Arnold's Machinery of Elko, The Foulger Company of Reno and former Elko business, David Hayes Service Company.

VICA at NNCC

EOT 2-19-86

Educators agree competition among students can be very helpful. That's so not only in sports, but academically as well, and the automotive and diesel students have such a competition nationwide through the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America (VICA).

Last year Nevada's first post-secondary VICA club was chartered at NNCC.

First year student Keith Rubert brought home the State's top VICA honors, ranking first in the automotive competition held in Carson City.

The NNCC campus was also selected as the site of the State VICA diesel finals. In effect, all students in this competition were winners, as many of the finest potential employers served as judges for the events. Those NNCC diesel students who were seeking employment were placed following this thoughtfully, instructor-orchestrated exposure.

VICA National Champion

Though new to post-secondary schools in Nevada, VICA was not new to diesel instructor Bret Murphy who was the Montana state champ in post-secondary competition in 1980 and again in 1981. He went on to compete in the National finals, pitted against the best college diesel technicians in the country, and took first place. Following five years experience in the construction and agriculture heavy duty machinery field, he decided teaching provided him the most personal satisfaction, much to NNCC's benefit.

With highly-qualified, motivated instructors: a new two-year Associate degree, and the latest in equipment the students of Northern Nevada Community College's automotive and diesel technology programs are receiving the extra edge needed to put them ahead of the pack.

Marguerite P. Evans scholarship formed

Donations to the Northern Nevada Community College Foundation have enabled the creation of the Marguerite P. Evans Entrepreneurial Scholarship, announced NNCC President Bill Berg. He added Evans is a longtime Nevada resident known for her high standards in education.

The scholarship will be awarded to the person who best exemplifies the qualities necessary for becoming a successful innovator in the field of business, explained John Pryor, chairman of NNCC's business department and director of the Small Business Development Center at the college.

Pryor added a candidate for the scholarship must: be a freshman who can demonstrate financial need, take 15 credits or more per semester, maintain a 2.5 grade point average, work a minimum of 10 hours a week as an intern with the Nevada Small Business Development Center and complete two years of study at NNCC.

The scholarship will give a student $1,800 a year for two years. Pryor said money from the Small Business Center, along with funds from a private donation, made the scholarship possible.

NNCC Awards

Northern Nevada Community College Scholarship and Awards Committee has announced their 1986-87 scholarships to be awarded to 1986 graduating seniors at Elko High School. Kejan Bhakta, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ishver Bhakta, has been awarded a Lions Club Scholarship; Joyce Lowry, daughter of Mrs. Claire Williamson, was also awarded a Lions Club Scholarship; and Shelly Simmons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Simmons, has been awarded the CP National Scholarship. Noel L. Bondo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Bondo, was named to receive a NNCC Agricultural Scholarship. E.L. 6/25/86

Sandra Snapp, a nursing student at Northern Nevada Community College, is among 22 Nevada women who are to receive $1,500 scholarships from the Nevada Women's Fund, reports Fritsi Ericson, executive vice-president of the organization.

Doris Allison, an anthropology major at NNCC, was awarded a $500 scholarship.

The scholarships were presented at a reception May 20 at Harrah's in Reno, at which donors to the women's fund were recognized. Featured speaker was Rosalyn Carter, wife of former President Jimmy Carter, who spoke about the changing role of women.

Student women were given a total $20,000 during the reception, said Ericson.

Founded in 1982, the fund has awarded more than $111,000 to individuals and groups, of which $41,000 has been for scholarships.

EVANS SCHOLARSHIP — The Marguerite P. Evans Entrepreneurial Scholarship has been announced by Northern Nevada Community College. The scholarship — named for a long-time Elko resident — is $1800 per year for two years and will be given to the NNCC student who best exemplifies the qualities necessary for becoming a successful business innovator. Additional criteria include maintenance of a 2.5 cumulative grade point average while taking 15 credits per semester. The student must also plan to remain at NNCC for two years and be willing to serve an internship of 10 hours per week with the college's Small Business Development Center. EKKO Independent
