Regents Cut Community College President Position

LAS VEGAS (AP) — In a surprise move, the University of Nevada Board of Regents has announced it has abolished the presidency of the community college division, leaving Dr. Charles Donnelly without a job.

Donnelly, who built the job virtually from scratch, received the unexpected news Saturday from university chancellor Neil Humphrey. Donnelly has been president of Nevada's community colleges since 1970.

The abolishment of Donnelly's $38,000-a-year position will be effective July 1. He has been offered a teaching job with the community college, but the stunned president said he plans to look elsewhere for employment first.

The regents' action came during a closed personnel session Friday afternoon in Las Vegas. The vote was unanimous.

Board vice-chairman Molly Knudtsen of Austin said the decision was purely a financial one, made in the wake of the Nevada Legislature's elimination of nearly all Donnelly's central office staff members. She said the legislature's action

"emasculated" Donnelly's office, leaving him to function merely as a figurehead. Because of that, she added, the regents decided it wasn't economical to keep the presidency.

But Donnelly's resistance to establishment of a community college campus in Fallon apparently affected the board's decision. Donnelly had said such a move was too expensive for the small number of students it would serve.

Regent John Tom Ross, who represents the Fallon area, repeatedly disagreed with Donnelly and claimed the 55-year-old president was too busy with urban community colleges to worry about the rural areas.

Asked what the regents' motive was for abolishing his job, Donnelly said he didn't know.

"The only thing that came up in the meeting yesterday (Friday) was that I hadn't really supported community college efforts in the rural area," Donnelly said. "But I think they'd have a tough time proving that, especially if they went over and talked to some of the people in Elko and Ely."

Donnelly said chancellor Humphrey told him Saturday that the regents' action "wasn't anything against me, but just that it was the elimination of a position."

"I think I've done a good job and always said what I felt was right... maybe that was the problem."

Regent Ross, a Carson City lawyer, acknowledged that his vote to abolish Donnelly's job was influenced by his disagreement with the president on the rural-vs.-urban question.

"I think that he (Donnelly) was trying to change the whole thrust of our community college system," Ross said. "His thrust was for duplicate facilities in Reno and Las Vegas and to hell with the rural. The legislators didn't like that and I didn't like it, either."

But not everyone agrees with that. Dr. Hugh Collet, chairman of the Elko campus' advisory panel, said, "I think the balance has been proper. I think Dr. Donnelly has stood up for the rural community colleges."

"I think in many respects he's just a genius. He came here with no students, no programs and in just a few years developed a system which now serves thousands of people."

VA Loans Available To NNCC Students

Veterans seeking loans to meet higher education expenses this fall will get a new deal from the Veterans Administration if they act quickly, Dick Myers, Veteran Coordinator, said today.

The VA streamlined its student loan procedures by pre-processing student loan applications from veterans.

"The key to making sure the student receives his loan promptly, however, is the veteran himself," Dick Myers said.

VA will make loans of up to $1,500 each academic year to qualified students.

In the past, loan applications were not processed until after the student started school. Now, Dick Myers said, the agency hopes to reduce the 30-day waiting period by accepting applications and determining loan eligibility before school starts.

"Under the new procedure," Dick Myers explained, "VA will be ready to issue the loan soon after the school confirms the student is in class."

Two conditions must be present for a veteran enrolled on at least a half-time basis to qualify:

The veteran must demonstrate that his essential expenses during the school year will be greater than his income; he must have been turned down by two banks in the area, or the school must certify that area banks are not making guaranteed student loans.

Myers urges veterans who plan to apply for a loan to contact him or the campus financial aid officer at Northern Nevada Community College, 901 Elm, Elko.

He emphasized that early applications are essential if the student wishes to have the loan available soon after school starts.

'Star Parties' to Be Shown at NNCC

By NNCC

Last year Tom Ross, who has been an astronomer since he was a child, brought "star parties" to NNCC. "Star parties," he said have little relation to the current movie rage, "Star Wars." "Star parties" are really just as entertaining and far more educational, he explained.

"Star parties" represent a sidelight of Ross' course, Physics 109, "Observational Astronomy," which will be repeated this fall at NNCC. In the class and the observational parties, students learn the arrangement of stars in the night sky and their movements with the seasons.

The classroom segment of the class is used to learn about what is observed with the unaided eye and with telescopes. A newly purchased Celestron 8 telescope and a recently published and up-to-date text support students' efforts.

Ross points out that when weather and moon phases permit, half the class periods will be spent outdoors in observation. Students will progress from constellation finding to projects of their own design, such as watching light changes of a variable star, tracking a planet against background stars, and photographing the moon's phases.

Classroom work, aided by NASA films, considers the advance in knowledge during the 20-year-old space age. The astronomy class will begin with a study of the solar system and then move to much more exotic objects: black holes, neutron stars, white dwarfs, novae and supernovae, the birthplaces and cemeteries of stars in galaxies, and the people and experiments exploring them.

Ross concludes: "We learn to appreciate the extent and grandeur of the universe as well as the delicate, finely tuned balance which permits life to exist on at least one planet, our beloved Earth."

Exercising may burn up some calories, but not a lot. However, regular exercising whether you are dieting or not is very beneficial to firming up muscles and keeping one feeling fit.

Challenging Job Market Requires Business Math

By NNCC

Math is back.

The stuffy old subject that seemed to be "out" just a few years ago on college campuses is back "in." The reason can probably be traced to the challenging job market.

Whether students like math or not is now out of the question. Practically every occupational program now requires some math, and, without it, the individual may find himself in trouble when he competes for a job.

Take business, for example. That is where most job opportunities are today. Probably this will continue to be the case over the next several years. Business includes sales, accounting, management, data processing, and more. All of these require at least business mathematics. For persons pursuing higher degrees and planning to compete in the business world, courses like statistics, computer math and business calculus will probably be necessary.

Today, according to an NNCC math instructor, a knowledge of statistics is so important in evaluating information that you can't really expect to communicate intelligently in the business world without it.

Many college students who had not planned to take mathematics after high school are facing courses without sound foundations. The complaint from instructors is universal. NNCC instructors in accounting and bookkeeping have noted that many students simply drop out because they have no preparation in math. The same complaint is echoed at Winnemucca from instructors in aeronautics and secretarial accounting. One NNCC-Winnemucca instructor put it this way: "Plenty of women can make excellent salaries in office administration — in some places up to $20,000 a year. But office administration has become an increasingly complex matter, and math is there, along with statistics, every day."

Persons taking fire science courses such as fire hydraulics, electronics classes, and automotive technology need a solid foundation in math — preferably technical math.

"This year, we plan a full-range of math classes," said Dr. William Berg, NNCC Executive Vice-President. Dr. Mark Melrose, a mathematician, will be joining the NNCC staff this fall and will be conducting classes in technical math, business math, as well as college algebra and other community college level math classes."

Berg points out that the developmental math program, conducted in the Adult Learning Center, is a good place to start for persons who feel weak in math. In the developmental math program, a student can start at his level — regardless of where he is — and prepare himself for college level classes. In this program, a student always receives individual tutorial help and he receives different kinds of aid — ranging from audio-visual to self-paced programmed instruction. The developmental math instructor is Amy Emerson.

Student Financial Aid Available

BY NNCC

Northern Nevada Community College financial aid programs consist of scholarships or grant assistance and self-help (loan and employment) which may be offered singly or in various combinations to students who demonstrate need.

The primary purpose of a collegiate financial aid program should be to provide financial assistance to accepted students who, without such aid, would be unable to attend college.

The basic premise of financial aid programs is that the parents and students are primarily responsible for meeting the expenses of a college education. College costs include such items as tuition and fees, room and board, books and supplies, clothing, laundry, recreation, travel, and incidentals. When the cost involved exceeds the amount that the family can reasonably contribute, a "financial need" is deemed to exist.

The process of objectively measuring what a family can provide from its income and assets is called "need analysis." Most colleges subscribe to an independent need analysis service such as the College Scholarship Service or the American College Testing Program. In ascertaining what application procedures are required, students should consult the catalogue published by the college in which they are interested, or contact the financial aid office at each college. The financial aid application will require pertinent information relative to the family's financial circumstances and any other items necessary to determine the amount of aid a student needs and for what type of programs he may be eligible. The data collected are always kept confidential.

The United States Office of Education supports the Basic Educational Opportunity Grants (BEOG), Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants (SEOG), College Work-Study (CWS), National Direct Student Loan (NDSL), and the Guaranteed Student Loan.

Students planning to attend Northern Nevada Community College during the fall semester should contact the Student Services Office if additional financial aid information is necessary.

Elko College Offers Education and Recreation

By NNCC

People who want to keep active but need extra push to get started will have plenty of help from this fall's NNCC physical education and recreation classes.

Among classes offered are slimnastics and weight control, bridge, jogging, karate, horsemanship and creative dance.

The ever-popular jogging class, held at noon so as to encourage persons also wanting to lose weight, will continue with the 50-mile and 100-mile club for those who want to build up miles. "But belonging to the joggers club isn't a requirement of the class," said Bill Davies, Student Services Director. "The class provides people of all ages a reasonable way to get prepared for jogging, to exercise a bit, and to feel better. Nobody is pushed."

Repeated this fall will be "Football Seminar for Women," conducted by Elko High School coach Moyal Kump. The class is primarily aimed at mothers of players and future players, but others may benefit from it. The class covers such items as formations, plays, rules, and coaches' decisions. A question and answer session is featured.

The popular horsemanship class is also returning this fall. The emphasis, however, is different and is titled "Beginning Huntseat." Instructed by Mary Branscomb and others, the class will begin a few weeks after the regular fall semester starting date.

Bridge, taught by Reed Braithwaite, will provide instruction to beginners and novices.

Partial Solar Eclipse in Progress

This series of three photographs taken by Gordon Campbell of Elko shows Wednesday's partial solar eclipse in advancing stages from left to right. The eclipse occurred when the moon, during its orbit about the earth, passed between earth and sun.

The photos at the lower portion of the page were taken at Northern Nevada Community College as students and other interested Elkoans watched some

Other methods demonstrated included the projection of an image to shaded wall by use of a mirror; and creation of a small image with the "pinhole camera" effect produced by punching a small hole in one card project the image of the sun to a second card held about three feet away.

For Those Who Plan Ahead...

A reminder for those who plan ahead: the next solar eclipse on the astronomy schedule for this region is due Monday, Feb. 26, 1979. Astronomers say it will be a partial eclipse here in Elko County, but a total eclipse in Oregon, Idaho, Montana and Canada. It will be the last solar eclipse of this century in Elko County, they say.

YESTERDAY'S SOLAR ECLIPSE, during which a portion of the sun was obscured by the moon as it passed between the earth and the sun, is illustrated here in an image projected through a telescope and onto a card held by Tom Ross of Carlin, who teaches an astronomy course at Northern Nevada Community College. Ross demonstrated a variety of ways to view the eclipse yesterday during the approximately two hours the partial eclipse was in progress. This photo was taken at about the time of maximum coverage, which was officially listed as 1:11 p.m.

NNCC Hires Two New Faculty Members

Dr. William Berg, NNCC President, has announced two new faculty appointments for 1977-78. They are Dr. Mark Melrose, instructor in mathematics, and Craig Michler, instructor in the administration of justice program.

Michler will be the first full-time instructor NNCC has employed in administration of justice. Melrose replaces Dr. Ronald Wilson, who has resigned.

Michler, 31, is a graduate of California State University, Hayward, where he received bachelor's and master's degrees in public administration. He was an instructor in criminal justice at Santa Ana College, California. He is an army veteran, and has served seven years in the Berkeley Police Department. Michler and his wife, Evelyn Ann, have two children, Andrew, 5, and Joanna, 2.

Melrose, 36, is completing a Doctor of Arts in mathematics at Idaho State University. He holds BA degrees in math and philosophy from Washington State University and an MS degree in math from Memphis State University. A native of Washington state, he has been an instructor at several community colleges, including Columbia Basin College in Pasco, Washington, and Kololo College in Kampala, Uganda. He also served as a math teacher in the Peace Corps in Uganda.

"Mark Melrose is well qualified in math and will improve our program significantly," said Berg. "Craig Michler's practical experience and his academic preparation are exactly what we've been looking for to strengthen our program in law enforcement and corrections," Berg added.

Melrose has served as a munitions officer in the Air Force and is an active member of the Air Force Reserve. He also teaches computer science and physics.

DEMONSTRATING WOOLSPINNING is Adrienne Hall (right) to Bill Peterson who will both instruct courses this fall in Northern Nevada Community College's special project, "Pioneer Arts and Crafts." Hall will teach classes in spinning and natural dyeing and Peterson will instruct students in the art of watercolor painting.

Pioneer Arts, Crafts Project Gets Funding

Continued funding for the special project "Pioneer Arts and Crafts" has been announced by Dr. William Berg, Executive Vice-President of Northern Nevada Community College. The Nevada State Council on the Arts has granted $6,000 for the project which will be coordinated by Sarah Campsey, art instructor for the college.

New classes for Pioneer Arts and Crafts are being registered at the college this week. Some of the classes and demonstrations scheduled are spinning, weaving, natural dyeing, soap making, banjo making, corn husk dolls, yeast breads, pie making, quilting, bread dough art, and watercolors. Classes in stained glass, leathercraft, and hide tanning will be announced later this fall.

Spinning Nevada wool and gathering native materials for natural dyeing will be taught by Adrienne Hall. Hand cards, drop spindles, and spinning wheels are available for classroom use. Other types of wool and fiber will be spun. The class will meet each Friday from 1 until 4 p.m. beginning Sept. 16, and continuing for 10 weeks for two community service credits.

Leonore Rush will be using a new floor loom, in addition to other floor and table looms, for the combined beginning and advanced weaving class taught on Thursday evenings from 7 to 10 beginning Sept. 15, for two community service credits. She has been teaching the weaving classes for the past two years at the college.

Students registering in Banjo making will design and construct their own banjos in a class taught in the Elko High School woodshop by Don Hewitt, beginning Sept. 6, at 7 p.m. He has taught two classes in dulcimer making and one banjo making and playing class previously. He plans a guitar making class in the future.

Lee Breitenstein will offer a series of one night workshops in corn husk dolls, Nov. 8; yeast breads, Oct. 25, and pie making, Nov. 29. Two soap making workshops will be held Oct. 4, at 9 a.m. and Oct. 18, at 7 p.m. by Lenore Rush. A two-day workshop on bread dough art will be held by Mary Harper Nov. 7, and Nov. 14, at 9 a.m. Bonnie Sucec, Utah artist, will assist in this workshop. These workshops are no-credit and carry a fee of $3 per day. Participants will be furnished with materials and samples.

Bill Peterson will be holding a 10-week workshop beginning Sept. 29, 7 p.m., in Watercolor for two credits. Basic information in methods, materials, and techniques will be offered in this course. He has his MA degree in Studio Arts from the University of California, Sacramento. He is presently activity director at Ruby Mountains Manor. He will have a one-man show at North-eastern Nevada Museum in December.

Saturday morning at 9 a.m. beginning Sept. 10, a quilting class will be taught by Marsha Davis. This 10-week class will be offered for two credits.

The community service credit classes carry a fee of $1 per credit hour.

Anyone interested in serving as a resource person or establishing new classes in some pioneer art or craft is asked to contact Sarah Campsey at the Community College, 901 Elm Street, Elko, Nevada 89801. Telephone: 738-8493

Bus Driver Classes Held Here

Nearly 50 driver trainees were enrolled in a school bus driver's class here this week at the Northern Nevada Community College.

Jim Menath, director of the program, said the school is a cooperative project between the community college system and the State Department of Education using federal highway safety funds.

Seven Nevada driving instructors were certified to teach in the program at a special training session last week at the Stead campus north of Reno. Among the drivers certified was Jerry Hassett of Elko.

The program, also held in Elko last year, is set up to give the rural bus drivers of Nevada additional training.

The drivers were divided into eight groups and they moved from class to class during the day. Among the classes offered were railroad crossing procedures, public relations, emergency evacuation, fire fighting, defensive driving and transportation of special education students.

Bill Webb of Elko instructed a first aid class and Chuck Miller of Elko taught the fire suppression course.

The Elko County School District supplied a bus for the school that started Wednesday and ended Friday.

The participants of the school were provided with a dinner Tuesday night by the Kiwanis Club and had a luncheon at the Ranchinn Motor Lodge Friday.

ONE OF THE classes offered at the bus driver's school held at the Northern Nevada Community College this week was fire suppression. Chuck Miller (left) of the Elko Fire Department taught the class. Forty-seven drivers from nine rural Nevada counties attended the school.

Self-Paced Instruction, An Innovation at NNCC

Aug 77

By NNCC

Self-paced instruction, which has been gaining popularity on college campuses, has made steady inroads at Northern Nevada Community College in recent years. Its gains have been made at the expense of the time-honored lecture system.

Self-paced instruction has many important advantages. Often called "Mastery Learning", self-paced instruction is individually tailored to a person's own time schedule. In self-paced instruction, courses are divided into units. The units may be adapted to several media forms — audio-visual or cassette-workbook, for example. The student completes to mastery each unit — regardless of how long it takes — before proceeding to the next.

The advantage over the lecture system is obvious. The lecture system, being teacher-centered rather than student-centered, is really aimed at minimum opportunities. In the lecture system, if a student misses a section, or sections, he could be lost for the course. In mastery learning, with its use of self-paced, use-anytime materials, the student simply does not proceed until he is tested for mastery of a unit.

Moreover, self-paced mastery learning increases student access to courses. Self-paced courses are offered at anytime the college doors are open. Employed adults, for example, can for the first time have options in scheduling and can complete required courses heretofore unavailable to them because of scheduling problems.

Several self-paced courses are on the NNCC Fall semester schedule: all levels of typing, secretarial career classes such as business machines and office administration, United States history, and general psychology. For the first time, freshman composition and rhetoric is offered as a self-paced course, but permission to enroll in the class must be obtained from the instructor, Fred Fogo.

One word of warning: self-paced classes are meant for self-starters, and they should not be confused with correspondence courses. Persons enrolling in them must set up a schedule through contract with the instructor.

"Persons who are accustomed to traditional lecture classes may miss the socializing of traditional classes," said Dr. Charles Greenhaw. "Furthermore, these classes are frequently more demanding of students than traditional classes. Students — particularly those who through long years of getting accustomed to having the teacher do everything but pass the test for them — will find their depth and breadth challenging. On the other hand, for serious students who are interested in achievement and mastery and who are disciplined enough to let the time vary, these self-paced courses are real opportunities. Certainly, they upset conventional ways of thinking about education."

'Stitchery' Offered At College

Aug. 77
APF

A new offering at the Northern Nevada Community College for this semester is "Stitchery," taught by Ann Nisbet, local home economist.

The art course is available for three transfer credits, and will be held on Wednesday evenings from 7 to 10 p.m. The first class will be an orientation session to be held in Room 3 of the Vocational-Technical Building. Subsequent sessions will be held in Room 16 of the Learning Resources Building.

Areas to be covered during the course, all of which will require the use of a zigzag sewing machine, include applique techniques, an introduction to sewing machine embroidery, stuffed toy making, scrap projects, designing and executing an original banner, Christmas decorations and other topics as desired by the class.

Participants who own machines will be asked to bring their own when possible. Further information may be obtained by calling the instructor at 738-5475.

Law Course Scheduled At NNCC

Aug. 77

Charles Greenhaw of the Northern Nevada Community College today announced, "One of the many practical classes offered this fall at the NNCC is introduction to law, technically entitled business law, to be taught by local attorney Rich Barrows."

Greenhaw explained that the course will be an introduction to general law with emphasis on law affecting business relations such as contracts, sales and real estate transactions, designed to benefit all merchants and consumers, including housewives.

The class will meet Wednesdays from 7 to 10 p.m. this fall. Persons desiring further information may call Rich Barrows at 738-7271 days and 738-6949 evenings.

College's Modern Library Is a Community Resource

July 77

By NNCC

A few years ago people who visited the Northern Nevada Community College library came away thinking the whole thing was a joke. In 1970 about all the library could boast was a few scattered boxes of books, most of them donated by well-wishers, along with some popular periodical collections such as "National Geographic", "Life", and "Time."

Today's visitors are still amazed at the library, but for different reasons. In just a few years it has become an "up-front" operation serving not just college students, but any Nevada resident. Its clients range from businessmen, to local agency officials, to Elko County School District students. Moreover, the library is a part of the Nevada library cooperative service and regularly makes its books, films, slides, and other materials available to people throughout the state.

As the college observes its tenth anniversary, the library has become the showplace of the campus. It is a pleasant area with a "now" look and with quiet classical music wafting through its spaciousness. It boasts comfortable furniture and individual study carrels. And it also houses some special materials (Basque, American Indian, Nevada history, and art) that would make any youthful institution boastful.

What happened in just a few years to make the NNCC library (it's really a learning resources center providing much more than books) an up-to-date service? First, there was much hard work on the part of the faculty who selected the materials along with Juanita Karr, the director.

The Fleischmann Foundation, which has a special fondness for libraries, granted the college a $100,000 nest egg. This money, plus other grants, helped turn the library into a true learning resources center with a wide array of audio-visual materials. The LRC staff now claims that the center has more than 20,000 books, hundreds of tapes, slides, and filmstrips. Several complete audio-visual courses are now available for independent study. Lately, the LRC has entered the video cassette field and this fall will make the famous "Ascent of Man" program available to off-campus centers in Battle Mountain, Winnemucca, and McDermitt.

An adequate range of periodicals keeps community college students abreast of late developments in their fields of interest.

Most people these days agree that the learning resources center has come a long way from its meager beginnings. There is little doubt that it is the finest postsecondary facility of its kind within a radius of several hundred miles. In addition, it is a true "learning place."

57 Students To Get Diplomas from NNCC This Spring, Summer

Fifty-seven students at Northern Nevada Community College will receive diplomas this spring and summer. Forty-three will graduate at the spring commencement May 16 and another 14, all of them nursing students, will receive degrees during the summer commencement in July.

This year's graduating class is the largest ever at the 10-year-old college.

Noted Nevada author Robert Laxalt will address the May 16 graduating group. Laxalt, author of several books and articles on the state's Basque heritage, is director of the University of Nevada Press.

Jackie Goodyear, the "People Painter," is returning to Elko to do commissioned portraits and instruct oil painting workshops at Northern Nevada Community College, according to an announcement from the Elko County Art Club.

Daytime classes are scheduled from August 29 through 31 and September 7 through 9. The three-day classes will be from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

NNCC's Newspaper Course Studies Criminal Justice

By NNCC

Northern Nevada Community College, in cooperation with Elko Daily Free Press, will offer for credit the Courses by Newspaper's fall program on America's often-criticized criminal justice system.

Weekly newspaper articles, one component of the course entitled "Crime and Justice in America," will appear each week beginning after Labor Day in the Free Press.

Fourteen noted authorities — including a federal judge and an ex-felon — authored the course articles under the direction of Jerome H. Skolnick, Chairman for the Center for the Study of Law and Society, University of California, Berkeley.

Readers of this series who wish to enroll in the course for credit or who wish to attend discussion sessions based on the series may enroll during the regular college registration, September 1-2. There are two types of enrollment — AOJ 285, "selected Topics in the Administration of Justice," and HUM 232, "Crime and Justice in America."

All enrolling students are required to participate in two discussion periods. A mid-semester and final exam, both based on the articles and a reader, are required.

The course books, "A Reader" and "Study Guide," must be purchased at the college bookstore.

Topics explored in the course include the nature of crime; white collar, organized, and street crime; criminal law; the administration of criminal justice; and punishment.

Among the course authors are:

- Bilbert Geis, Professor of Social Ecology, University of California, Irvine;
- Francis Ianni, Professor and Director, Horace Mann-Lincoln Institute, Teachers College, Columbia University;
- James F. Short, Jr., Professor of Sociology, Washington State University;
- Lois DeFleur Nelson, Professor of Sociology, Washington State University of New York;

Other authors include:

- John Kaplan, the Jackson Eli Reynolds Professor of Law, Standord University;
- Judge Damon J. Keith,

Federal District Court, Eastern Division of Michigan;

- Caleb Foote, Professor of Law, Harvard University;
- David Rothman, Professor of History, Columbia University;

— John Irwin, Associate Professor of Sociology, San Francisco State University, and inmate; and

- Sheldon Messinger, Professor and former Dean, School of Criminology, University of California, Berkeley.

For additional information on this course, contact Bill Davies, Student Services, NNCC. Telephone: 738-8493.

Courses by Newspaper was developed in 1973 by University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and is funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities, with additional funding for this course from the Center for Studies of Crime and Delinquency, National Institute of Mental Health.

The fall series "Crime and Justice in America" is the seventh in a continuing series of timely educational features prepared by Courses by Newspaper.

Previous courses have been offered by more than 600 newspapers with a combined circulation of approximately 20 million readers. An estimated 30,000 newspaper readers have earned valuable college credit through the program offered by more than 300 educational institutions.

BRAD ROBERTS, former student body president at NNCC, poses with some of the seven-foot tomato plants he has grown in his back yard on Douglas St. Roberts, who received an associate degree last spring in farm and ranch management, plans to enroll at the college again this fall on a part-time basis to take some accounting and business courses. Roberts reports his unusually tall tomatoes received no special treatment, but he felt their growth was encouraged by providing trellises for them. His 12 plants averaged about three dozen tomatoes when counted last week and one has produced 50 fruit to date, with time still left in the Elko growing season.

Education Class To Be Offered at NNCC

Sept. 8, 77

"For some people the choice of teaching, like that of medicine or the clergy, is the fulfillment of a childhood ambition based on a romanticized and idealized conception of the vocation. For others the mattress theory applies — having something to fall back on," quotes Sarah Campsey from the text she plans to use for a new course offering, Education 103, at NNCC. The seminar type class will be discussing the role of the educator with classroom activities in grade contracting, transactional analysis, role-playing, reality therapy, interpersonal relationship, and affective education.

Ms. Campsey has just returned from a year's study at the University of Utah where she graduated Phi Kappa Phi with a Master of Education in Curriculum Development with emphasis in human relations and art education. As the recipient of a teaching fellowship, she supervised student teachers in the secondary level and was an instructor for Weber State University in art education.

Other classes to be taught this fall by Ms. Campsey are Drawing I and II which will place primary emphasis on learning to see and record what is seen and felt with the developing skill of the hand. A variety of media will be explored. The Beginning Crafts class will learn Batik, woodcarving, macrame and other textile and three-dimensional crafts. Furniture refinishing and chair caning will be included.

Fall Bulb Planting At College

Color for the college will be a Pioneer Arts and Crafts activity accomplished by planting bulbs on campus this fall, Sarah Campsey, project coordinator, announced today.

The addition of "local color" will celebrate the Northern Nevada Community College's tenth anniversary in Elko and the planting will take place Friday from 9 to 4 and Saturday, 9 to noon, Mrs. Campsey said.

Anyone in the community with bulbs or time to donate to the project is asked to call the college, 738-8493, extension 29, or come to the college at the times above.

Mrs. Campsey explained the idea for the planting was developed in her crafts class when Audrey White and Ann Nisbet mentioned they wished to donate bulbs for planting.

Test Set Saturday

The next scheduled testing date for the Career Planning Profile test is Saturday, Sept. 17, in the Voc-Tech building at Northern Nevada Community College commencing at 8:30 a.m. and ending at 12 noon. There is a fee of $5.75 for this test.

The CPP is an admission requirement for the Nursing and Business programs.

Students in other programs may take the test to aid them in vocational placement. Students should contact the Student Services Office at 738-8493 (ext. 25) if they have any further questions.

Pioneer Arts Project Funded

Sept 9

Continued funding for the special project "Pioneer Arts and Crafts" has been announced by Dr. William Berg, Executive Vice-President of Northern Nevada Community College. The Nevada State Council on the Arts has granted $6,000 for the project which will be coordinated by Sarah Campsey, art instructor for the college.

New classes for Pioneer Arts and Crafts are being registered at the college this week. Some of the classes and demonstrations scheduled are spinning, weaving, natural dyeing, soap making, banjo making, corn husk dolls, yeast breads, pie making, quilting, bread dough art, and watercolors. Classes in stained glass, leathercraft, and hide tanning will be announced later this fall.

Spinning Nevada wool and gathering native materials for natural dyeing will be taught by Adrienne Hall. Hand cards, drop spindles, and spinning wheels are available for classroom use. Other types of wool and fiber will be spun. The class will meet each Friday from 1 until 4 p.m. beginning Sept. 16, and continuing for 10 weeks for two community service credits.

Leonore Rush will be using a new floor loom, in addition to other floor and table looms, for the combined beginning and advanced weaving class taught on Thursday evenings from 7 to 10 beginning Sept. 15, for two community service credits. She has been teaching the weaving classes for the past two years at the college.

Students registering in Banjo making will design and construct their own banjos in a class taught in the Elko High School woodshop by Don Hewitt, beginning Sept. 6, at 7 p.m. He has taught two classes in dulcimer making and one banjo making and playing class previously. He plans a guitar making class in the future.

Lee Breitenstein will offer a series of one night workshops in corn husk dolls, Nov. 8; yeast breads, Oct. 25, and pie making, Nov. 29. Two soap making workshops will be held Oct. 4, at 9 a.m. and Oct. 18, at 7 p.m. by Lenore Rush. A two-day workshop on bread dough art will be held by Mary Harper Nov. 7, and Nov. 14, at 9 a.m. Bonnie Sucec, Utah artist, will assist in this workshop. These workshops are no-credit and carry a fee of $3 per day. Participants will be furnished with materials and samples.

Bill Peterson will be holding a 10-week workshop beginning Sept. 29, 7 p.m., in Watercolor for two credits. Basic information in methods, materials, and techniques will be offered in this course. He has his MA degree in Studio Arts from the University of California, Sacramento. He is presently activity director at Ruby Mountains Manor. He will have a one-man show at North-eastern Nevada Museum in December.

Saturday morning at 9 a.m. beginning Sept. 10, a quilting class will be taught by Marsha Davis. This 10-week class will be offered for two credits.

The community service credit classes carry a fee of $13 per credit hour.

Anyone interested in serving as a resource person or establishing new classes in some pioneer art or craft is asked to contact Sarah Campsey at the Community College, 901 Elm Street, Elko, Nevada 89801. Telephone 738-8493.

DEMONSTRATING WOOLSPINNING is Adrienne Hall (right) to Bill Peterson who will both instruct courses this fall in Northern Nevada Community College's special project, "Pioneer Arts and Crafts." Hall will teach classes in spinning and natural dyeing and Peterson will instruct students in the art of watercolor painting.

Doll Class Tomorrow At College

EDF Oct. 7, 77

Participants in the doll lamp making class beginning tomorrow morning will be using a combination of "found" objects and manufactured parts. Although a basic set of instructions will be used, the class members will be encouraged to make each lamp unique.

Doll heads, bodies and electrical needs will be available at the first class. The cost of the supplies is approximately $10. Enrollment for the class will be $6 which covers the two Saturday morning classes, Oct. 8 and Oct. 15, 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

Billie Ryan and Judy Cole, instructors for the class, asked that those planning to attend should bring a 1-1/2 gallon bleach jug to the first class. Anyone having extra bleach containers should bring them.

Class enrollment is open to ages 12 and over. Manufactured heads available are female dolls, clown, monkey, santa and a witch. Paper mache or other self-created styles may be developed.

Further information may be obtained from Judy Cole, at the college, 738-8493. This is a pioneer arts and crafts project sponsored by Nevada Council on the Arts, National Endowment for the Arts and NNCC.

Soapmaking Class Starts Next Tuesday

EDF Oct. 14

Lenore Rish, instructor for the soapmaking workshop, reports, "Homemade soap is a special pleasure, wonderful to use, inexpensive to give, good because you make it yourself. Until the late 1800's every household made its own soap. When coal and oil replaced wood as a source of heat, there was no more wood ash to fill the lye barrel. Manufactured soap started coming into use.

"Many people have the mistaken notion that soap contains lye. Once the mixture of fats and lye has become soap it is a completely neutral product.

"There is nothing milder than homemade toilet soap. It still contains all the glycerin, a by-product of the soapmaking process which the commercial manufacturers sell to other industries."

There will be an evening class Tuesday, Oct. 18, 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. It will be held in Room 12, LRC.

The workshop is $3 and samples of both the beauty soap made in the workshop and granulated washing powder will be available for the participants.

These Pioneer Arts and Crafts workshops are sponsored by Nevada State Council on the Arts, National Endowment for the Arts and NNCC.

Regents Vote To Abolish Community College Post

RENO (AP) — By the narrowest of margins, the University of Nevada Board of Regents has voted to abolish the central presidency of Nevada's three diverse community colleges.

The regents voted 6-3 — exactly the two-thirds majority required — to dissolve the position that was vacated three months ago when Community College Division President Charles Donnelly was, in effect, fired by the board.

Regents voted to replace the central presidency with individual and independent presidencies for Western Nevada Community College in Reno Sparks and in Carson City; Northern Nevada Community College in Elko; and, Clark County Community College in Las Vegas.

The vote officially ended the controversial issue that has festered ever since the Nevada Legislature last spring severely cut back Donnelly's central office staff to the point that the regents felt he would be nothing more than a figurehead.

Donnelly's departure last June was criticized by Gov. Mike O'Callaghan and state lawmakers. Donnelly has since taken a similar post in his home state of Michigan.

Community College

Friday's vote was in two parts — one to alter university codes and the other to amend board of regents bylaws.

In effect, the votes meant that three community college executive vice presidents were elevated to the rank of president — a standing formerly enjoyed only by the heads of the university's Reno and Las Vegas campuses and the Desert Research Institute.

The three new presidents are WNCC's Jack Davis, NNCC's William Berg, and CCCC's Russell Bloyer.

Each campus, in effect, now becomes an independent unit, although the Community College Division will continue as one administrative branch of the university system.

The regents also approved Acting Chancellor Donald Baeppler's request to hire one staff member to help coordinate relations among the three colleges through the chancellor's office.

Regent Dr. Louis Lombardi of Reno made a last-ditch stand to keep the central presidency intact during debate on the issue.

"Since this pattern has worked so well, why are we trying to change it?" he asked.

Regent Dr. Fred Anderson, also of Reno, joined in the defense and warned that the 1979 legislature might take action to create a separate community college system, complete with its own board of regents.

Regents Chairman James "Bucky" Buchanan responded by saying that the colleges are beyond the developmental stage and are now large enough to stand on their own, individually, without central control.

When the vote came, Regent Lilly Fong of Las Vegas voted "no" with Anderson and Lombardi. Voting for the change were chairman Buchanan, Brenda Mason of North Las Vegas, John Tom Ross of Carson City, John Buchanan of Las Vegas, and Chris Karamanos, also of Las Vegas.

Following the vote, Regent Mason asked the board to consider at its next meeting the question of splitting WNCC's Reno-Sparks and Carson City campuses into two separate colleges.

Chairman Buchanan said he won't vote for any more separate colleges, even though there is strong support for such a measure from Reno Sparks campus faculty.

Reno-Sparks faculty senate chairwoman Jo Anne Dain advocated such a change at the meeting. She said the campuses are separate geographically and philosophically, with separate faculty senates, student bodies and course emphases.

'Crime and Justice' Forum Set at Library

Oct. 25, 77

Humboldt Sun

Northern Nevada Community College will sponsor a public forum on "Crime and Justice in America" at 7:00 p.m. Thursday, October 27, in the Humboldt County Library. NNCC students enrolled in the course by newspaper, "Crime and Justice," are required to attend. However, the forum is open to the public at large and all persons are encouraged to participate.

The forum will focus on a variety of topical issues in the administration of justice — including victimless crimes, white collar crime and plea bargaining.

The forum will take the form of a panel discussion, followed by questions and comments from the audience. Panelists include Frank Oxborrow, NNCC instructor, Hy Forgeron, Lander County attorney, Richard Legarza, Winnemucca attorney, Bill Vickers, from the Winnemucca Mental Health Center, and Craig Michler, NNCC Administration of Justice instructor.

The forum has been made possible through a grant from the Nevada Humanities Committee.

NNCC offers crochet class

Oct. 25, 77

Baskets, pot hangers and flower pot covers will be some of the new patterns taught by Sara Ghrist in her beginning and advanced crochet class.

The nine-week class costs $18 and meets on Tuesdays from 7 to 9 p.m. in Room 2 VT. There is no age limit for enrolling in this Pioneer Arts and Crafts class.

Due to a conflict in time with the Yeast Bread Class and the Pie Making Class, these two crochet classes will be rescheduled for the students. For further information call Sara Ghrist, 738-6646.

This project is made possible by Nevada State Council on the Arts, National Endowment for the Arts and NNCC.

LPN students begin class

Oct. 25, 77

The 1978 Licensed Practical Nursing Class at Northern Nevada Community College began its work on Sept. 6, with 12 students.

The course is instructed by Mrs. Debra Day and the class members are Pam Bradshaw, Mary Beth Complita, Carol Copper, Roseann Darr, Lori Day, Jack Fedor, Renee Jacobs, Toni McClure, Joyce Metzler, Nora Meierhoff, Betty Sicley and Becky Welch.

Class officers are: president, Betty Sicley; vice president, Pam Bradshaw; secretary-treasurer, Mary Beth Complita; reporters, Renee Jacobs and Becky Welch.

The first month of the course was spent in classroom study. Starting the first of October, the students began spending two weeks in each of the various sections of the medical field. The two week periods are programmed to give the student experience in different situations and help them find where their interest lies in medicine, a spokesman said.

The class is planning various fund-raising projects for the coming year, the spokesman concluded.

Tanning Workshop At NNCC

Hunters, don't forget the "tanning hides" workshop to be held Nov. 19, which is the first Saturday after deer season, at NNCC.

Persons planning to attend should follow these procedures to keep the "green" deerskin or any other animal hide. Remove all flesh, fat, dried blood, and dirt, tail bone and dew claws.

Spread skin out flat, flesh side up and pour a generous amount of salt (not iodized) in the center of the skin. At least one pound of salt per one pound of hide should be used. Rub, work salt well to the edges, covering every part.

Fold skin flesh side to flesh side, roll up and place on a slanting surface to drain. In one to two days, unroll the hide, shake out the old salt and repeat the procedure, resalting well. Spread flat and let it dry in a cool, airy place.

An historical note, and early recipe recorded by Arabians calls for the skins to be put into flour and salt for three days and cleaned of all fats and impurities on the inside. The stalks of the Chuiga plant were pounded with large stones, then placed in water before applying to the inner skin for a day. The hair fell off, the skin was left for a couple of days and the process was complete.

Joe McKnight and Peter Emmons, workshop instructors, will be demonstrating the alum tanning method. Registration for the first workshop, which will be held Nov. 19 from 9 a.m. to 12 noon, is $3. The workshop will be held in the auto shop at NNCC.

At this meeting other dates for further workshops in soaking, fleshing, dehairing, delimiting, and skudding rawhide and braiding will be arranged.

This is a Pioneer Arts and Crafts workshop sponsored by Nevada State Council on the Arts, National Endowment for the Arts, and NNCC. Further information can be obtained by calling Sarah Campsey, 738-8493, ext. 29.

Enrollment scheduled for 39 NNCC courses

Thirty-nine classes are slated for the Fall Alternate term at Northern Nevada Community College. A two-day enrollment period is set for Oct. 27-28, with classes to begin the week of Nov. 1.

The Fall Alternate, a semester within a term, concludes with the beginning of the Spring semester in January.

"This special semester is a convenience for many people," said Dr. Charles Greenhaw. "It provides opportunity for people who have recently moved to Elko."

Included in the fare are several self-paced classes in office administration.

These classes, all conducted in the audio-visual laboratory, permit persons to arrange their own times during the 45 hours a week the lab is open.

"The self-paced method of instruction is ideal for many people planning to enter secretarial careers and others wishing to brush up on office skills. It allows great flexibility for full-time students and working persons, and our experience with the program indicates substantially greater achievement compared with traditional office occupation classes. "It really allows for mastery learning," Greenhaw said.

The investments classes, with instructor Richard Rose, has also been added to the Fall Alternate. The class, scheduled for Thursday evenings, is designed for persons wishing to learn more about investment planning. It will cover such topics as the workings of the stock exchanges, mutual funds, municipal bonds, commodity trading, tax-exempt and tax-sheltered investing.

Gene Williams and Joe Alfred will team teach a fire science class, to be held Monday evenings. The class titled "Introduction to Fire Suppression," will emphasize the management of wild land fires. A wide array of audio-visual materials will be used in the class. They include slides on such topics as "Standard Fire Fighting Orders," "Fire Weather," "Fire Behavior," "Organization for Fire Suppression," and "Fire Crew."

Students who were unable to take technical drafting in September when the classes were cancelled will now have the opportunity to do so, according to Bruce Easterly, drafting instructor. Three levels of individualized drafting classes are set for Tuesday and Thursday evening. "Many persons," Easterly said, "enroll for special reasons - to create their own designs or to just learn more about blueprints. Others take the classes because they want to enter a drafting field or plan a career in architecture or engineering. We have purchased some new equipment that will make the drafting classes more attractive."

Enrollment open now for horsemanship class

Oct. 27, 77
Enrollment will be held today and tomorrow for a class in horsemanship offered at Northern Nevada Community College. Interested students can sign up at the NNCC student services office.

The class will emphasize beginning Huntseat, and will stress English riding for beginners with some jumping for more advanced riders. English tack is desirable but not required.

The class will run for six Saturday mornings at the Spring Creek Horse Palace, and on two Wednesday evenings at NNCC. Beginning Huntseat is open to children and adults with horses.

A fee of $30 will be charged each participant.

A video tape machine will be used to film the students, and the tapes will be played back for use by the instructor and student.

Other horsemanship films are planned.

Mary Branscomb of Lamoille will instruct the class.

New classes start soon ^{EDF} at NNCC ^{Nov. 4}

Two new classes are being offered next week at Northern Nevada Community College in the Pioneer Arts and Crafts program.

The new classes are corn husk dolls and bread dough art.

A two-morning workshop will be held in bread dough art on Monday, Nov. 7 and 14 from 9 a.m. to noon. Many gift ideas such as baskets, wall plaques, whimsical figures and other decorating items will be made by participants in this class.

The cost is $6, which includes most of the supplies.

The first class will be taught by Mary Harper, local artist. The second class will be team-taught by Mrs. Harper and Bonnie Sucec, a Salt Lake City artist.

Sucec is involved in outside wall murals and teaches craft classes for children through the University of Utah Continuing Education Department. She sells silk screen clothing, wall hangings and bread dough art through several art galleries in Salt Lake Valley.

Some of her work will be on display and for sale in the college library on Nov. 14. The class will be held in 12 LR.

On Nov. 8, Lee Breitenstein will teach a corn husk doll workshop. The cost of the workshop, which will run from 7 to 10 p.m., is $3, and supplies will be furnished for the students to complete their own project.

Centerpieces for holidays will be displayed and ideas given for many corn husk decorations. The class will be held in room 12 LR.

The weaving students of Lenore Rush have displayed some of the looms they built, as well as weaving projects, in the college library.

The Pioneer Arts and Crafts Program has obtained a good collection of books and periodicals in weaving, as well as a new floor loom and several table looms.

These workshops are made possible by a grant from the Nevada State Council on the Arts, the National Endowment for the Arts, and NNCC.

Eclipse Observed In Elko ^{W.P.} _{Oct. 14, 77}

Today's partial eclipse of the sun was observed by a number of Elkoans at about 1 p.m. at the Northern Nevada Community College Campus.

Tom Ross of Carlin, who teaches a class in astronomy at the college, demonstrated a variety of ways to observe the eclipse to the people who gathered at the campus for the event.

The passage of the moon between the sun and the earth caused the eclipse, and at the point of greatest coverage shortly after 1 o'clock about one third of the sun was obscured by the moon.

Club's growth given national recognition

The Elko Bridge Club has been recognized by the American Contract Bridge League (ACBL) for outstanding membership work, according to Richard L. Goldberg, Memphis, Tenn., the executive secretary of the ACBL.

The Elko unit increased its membership by 33-1/3 percent during the current year, which was the highest in the ACBL for all classifications. The Elko club is a class A unit. The Elko club now has 40 members and plays each Tuesday evening.

Certificates of recognition went to Judy Paoli, club president; Reed Braithwaite, membership chairman, and to the club itself.

According to Goldberg, certificates go to less than half of the ACBL membership groups throughout the United States, Canada, Mexico and Bermuda.

The Elko club will be joining thousands of other bridge players throughout North America on Monday evening with its annual benefit game to assist the Arthritis Foundation.

The Elko unit will sponsor a section of the Fall 1977 ACBL Continent-wide Charity Game, with play starting at 7:30 p.m. at Northern Nevada Community College.

The game is unique in that every player in every game throughout the continent will be playing the exact same hands under near identical conditions. Only one winner will emerge — the pair with the best percentage score on the computer-dealt set of hands.

Braithwaite, who is the charity chairman of the local club, said the public is invited to participate and a person need not be a member of the club to play.

Prizes will be presented to the ACBL Continent-wide winners as well as the victors in each of the 25 ACBL districts. Masterpoints, a method of ranking duplicate bridge players on an international basis, will be awarded to those who finish well in each and every game.

Proceeds from the game will be distributed through the ACBL's Charity Foundation to the Arthritis Foundation.

In addition, local winners (first or second in north-south and east-west directions) will receive dinners for two, donated by the Stockmen's Hotel, Commercial Hotel, Star Hotel, Nevada Dinner House, the Red Lion and Holiday Inn.

Refreshments will be furnished and door prizes awarded throughout the night, Braithwaite said, pointing out those wishing more information should contact him at 738-5380.

Legislators to Meet At Community College

Community colleges will be the topic of a legislative subcommittee meeting scheduled at 10 a.m. Friday, Dec. 9, in the Learning Resources Center at Northern Nevada Community College in Elko.

Assemblyman Thomas J. Hickey, D-Las Vegas, has called the meeting as chairman of the legislative commission's study subcommittee on community colleges in Nevada.

In announcing the meeting, Hickey noted that "earlier meetings of the subcommittee had heard considerable testimony on the organizational structure of the community colleges, on the need for additional community college campuses, and on student problems in transferring course credits between the community college and the university system." Hickey indicated that "The subcommittee plans to fully explore these questions as well as to assess the future need of Nevada residents for community colleges."

In addition to Hickey, Senators James I. Gibson, D-Clark; Norman D. Glaser D-Northern Nevada; William J. Raggio, R-Washoe; and Gary A. Sheerin, D-Carson City; and Assemblymen D. Roger Bremner,

Bill Peterson exhibit opens tomorrow

Elko artist Bill Petersen opens a retrospective exhibit of his drawings, paintings and photo oils tomorrow at the Northeastern Nevada Museum. The display, his first in Nevada, will continue in the museum's east gallery to Jan. 3, 1978.

Petersen says his work results from personal experiences and influences gained from nature, literature, science and social situations. Included in his solo show is experimental endeavors, realism and surrealism in both mixed and combined media.

Petersen received his AA in art from Sacramento City College, his BA and MA were earned at California State University, Sacramento. After his studies, he taught arts and crafts in the Sacramento Unified School District and worked with elderly and handicapped people.

Since 1971 he has exhibited extensively in northern California cities and has displayed his work in Canada.

A resident of Elko since 1976, he is activity director at Ruby Mountains Manor. He has also tutored and instructed adult basic education and hand-built ceramics at Northern Nevada Community College. In the college's pioneer arts and crafts program he has taught beginning watercolor.

His exhibit is partially funded by the National Endowment for the Arts through a grant from the Nevada State Council on the Arts.

During Petersen's show the museum will be open to 5 p.m. every day, except Christmas and New Year's days. Admission is free.

Diverging Opinion Regarding NNCC

Members of a legislative group studying community college programs in Nevada Friday heard divided opinion with regard to organization of the colleges in the state under the board of regents of the University of Nevada System.

Some local residents, represented by Mike Marfisi and Paul Sawyer (both of whom participated in the organization of Elko Community College several years ago) expressed support for a proposal to separate the community colleges from the university system; and others, including Dr. Hugh Collett, chairman of the advisory board for Northern Nevada Community College in Elko, favored maintaining the relationship with the university -- at least for the time being.

Marfisi explained that Elkoans who had organized the state's first community college here had believed from the start the college would function better if it operated separate from the university; and he contended now would be a good time to make the separation.

The discussion took place before the Legislative Commission's subcommittee on community colleges. The group held an earlier hearing in Las Vegas on the topic of community colleges, and plans to conduct a third session later this year in Reno, at a date not yet set.

Collett said members of the local board believe that although at some time in the future a separate board for community colleges might be necessary, this is not the best time to make such a change. He noted the local board had favored retention of the position of president of the community college division -- a post which was abandoned when the board of regents terminated Dr. Charles Donnelly -- but in a joint meeting with some of the regents the local board members agreed to try the new system for at least a year. Under this new system, the administrative heads of the three campuses in the state have been elevated to the status of "president" and meet directly with the regents.

Fred Fogo, representing the faculty at NNCC, spoke in favor of keeping the community colleges under the board of regents.

On another topic, Dorothy Gallagher, chairman of the board of trustees for Elko General Hospital, appeared to support a proposal for a course that would train registered nurses at the Elko college. Her position was supported by Deina Day, and Elko nurse.

William Berg, president of NNCC, reported the local college presently has more than 1,500 students involved in the total program, with 1,021 of them enrolled in college credit courses. Berg said NNCC has grown in enrollment by about 50 percent during the past four years; and he added the college offers some college-level classes to high school students in both Elko and Ely.

While members of the legislative group were in Elko they also toured Nevada Youth Training Center.

AN ARTS AND CRAFTS exhibit is currently being shown at the Northern Nevada Community College Library. Billie Ryan, left, and Joyce Lusty, members of Sarah Campsey's art class, display some of the drawings and paintings done by the 18 member class. The exhibit, which also includes wood carvings, block printing, batiks and silk screens, is open to the public through Dec. 16 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 7 to 10 p.m.

STANLEY AIAZZI, right, recently named administrative assistant at the Northern Nevada Community College, is welcomed to his new post with a six-inch stack of paperwork by NNCC President William Berg. Aiazzi will be responsible for coordinating the college's occupational programs and will continue as director of the cooperative education and work-experience programs. A native of Elko County, Aiazzi is in his seventh year at the college.

Aiazzi appointed NNCC assistant

Stanley Aiazzi has been named administrative assistant at Northern Nevada Community College, President William Berg announced today.

Aiazzi, now in his seventh year at the college, will be responsible for coordinating the college's occupational programs. He will continue as director of the cooperative education and work experience program, a position he has held since 1975.

Aiazzi, a native of Elko County, joined the NNCC faculty in 1971 as an instructor in agriculture. He later developed the cooperative education-work experience program in Elko and the off-campus centers in the five-county area served by the college. He also organized the NNCC rodeo Team which now competes in several western states.

He was recently elected president of the NNCC faculty senate.

As administrative assistant, he will coordinate curriculum and scheduling for occupational programs in agriculture, automotive mechanics, fire science, drafting and design, child development, and business.

A graduate of Eureka High School, Aiazzi holds a master's degree in agriculture economics from the University of Nevada, Reno. He and his wife, Joyce, have two daughters.

Variety of classes offered by NNCC

Agriculture

Ten courses for credit comprise the educational fare of Northern Nevada Community College's agriculture department for spring, 1978. This is the largest number of offerings to date in agriculture at NNCC.

At the Elko campus the courses are "Applied Animal Nutrition," "Livestock Diseases and Parasites," "Forage Crops," and "Range Management." In addition, students may enroll for either beginning or advanced welding, and also obtain credit for supervised work experience through cooperative education in agriculture.

Scheduled for the Winnemucca Center is "Plant, Soil and Water Science," and at Owyhee individuals may enroll in "Irrigation Systems."

Descriptions of the courses may be obtained by contacting Jim Lucas, NNCC agriculture instructor, during the registration period, tomorrow and Friday.

Computers

Two introductory computer courses will be offered this semester at Northern Nevada Community College. They are "Information and Computer Science," instructed by Mark Melrose, and "Survey of Data Processing," to be conducted by John Leubben.

"Information and Computer Science," a Monday evening class, will emphasize programming in BASIC, a computer language, to solve simple mathematical problems. Students will learn how to write and run their own programs on the NNCC terminal, which is linked to the UNR computer in Reno.

Persons interested in the class need a basic knowledge of arithmetic.

"Survey of Data Processing," another evening class, is a foundation course for the field. The course will emphasize the basic principles and main functions of data processing.

Common business applications will be used to examine a wide range of methods in data processing. Although the class is basically a survey, it will include sufficient detail so as to allow a student to understand methods and their effects on the design of a data processing system.

Both classes carry university parallel credit.

Justice

An array of courses in the Administration of Justice program at Northern Nevada Community College is scheduled for the 1978 spring semester.

Among the credit classes are "Principles of Investigation," "Probation and Parole," "Criminal Procedures," and "Prevention and Control of Delinquency." Several other administration of justice courses will be conducted at the Winnemucca Center and at Battle Mountain.

Enrolling in courses in the program will be area law enforcement and corrections personnel as well as individuals seeking pre-employment training, according to Craig Michler, NNCC instructor.

"NNCC's Administration of Justice program is now making it possible for area individuals to develop professionally," said Michler. "A person entering the NNCC justice program now has three options — law enforcement, juvenile justice, or corrections."

Sign language

American Sign Language (Ameslan) will be offered for the first time at Northern Nevada Community College this spring. The class, conducted by Jan Christensen, is set for Thursday evenings.

"Ameslan" is among the most popular sign systems in use in the United States, according to the instructor.

The class will concentrate on 375 different signs plus finger spelling and counting. Knowledge of these signs will enable an individual to converse with almost any deaf person or anybody who knows the sign language.

Christensen pointed out that "Ameslan" uses just a few key words to convey meanings. Facial expressions, he claimed, are just as important as the signs themselves in communication.

"Ameslan," Christensen concluded, is the 'real' sign language for the deaf."

Test set at college on Jan. 10

The next scheduled testing date for the Career Planning Profile test is Tuesday, Jan. 10. The test will be held in Northern Nevada Community College's Voc-Tech building commencing at 8:30 a.m. and ending at 12 noon. There is a fee of $5.75 for this test.

The CPP is an admission requirement for the Nursing and Business programs.

Students in other programs may take the test to aid them in vocational placement. Students should contact the Student Services Office at 738-8493 (ext. 25) if they have any further questions.

Two NNCC riders place

Two Northern Nevada Community College bareback bronc riders placed in competition at a rodeo sponsored by Imperial Valley College in Brawley, Calif., this past weekend. NNCC Rodeo club president Jerry Jones placed second and picked up 72 points toward individual and team standings, after receiving a score of 62 for his ride in the one go-around event.

Freshman rider Mike Jones split a 4th place standing and received 35 points. The double placing allowed the NNCC team to accumulate 107 points in team standings. NNCC's other two bareback riders, Alkie Mariluch and Kenny Merkley, rode their stock, but did not score high enough to place in the top six positions. Mark Laughlin, the lone NNCC bull rider at Brawley, failed to complete his ride.

This weekend, Jan. 21 and 22, the NNCC team will travel to Yuma, Ariz., to compete at Western Arizona College.

Six team members will make the trip. Andrea Baer will compete in the breakaway roping; Jerry Jones, Mike Jones, and Laughlin will enter the bull riding event; and in the bareback bronc riding, there will be four entries - Jerry Jones, Mike Jones, Mariluch and Merkley.

NNCC rodeo team to open 1978 season in Brawley

Northern Nevada Community College's 1978 Rodeo team kicked off the new season with its annual banquet held Saturday, Jan. 7 at the VFW Hall in Elko with some 50 persons in attendance.

The banquet gave parents and rodeo club backers a chance to meet this year's team, which started its season today at Imperial Valley College in Brawley, Calif. For the first time, NNCC will field a full team with six cowboys and two cowgirls.

Previously NNCC had competed on an individual basis. Former team member Vince Garcia was the top saddle bronc rider in the Western Region in 1976 and finished second in the national finals in Bozeman, Mont., winning a $500 scholarship. He has used up his NNCC eligibility and this year will be riding for the University of Nevada, Reno.

The Western Region, in which NNCC competes, consists of 23 colleges and universities from Arizona, California and Nevada and includes University of Arizona, Arizona State, Cal Poly Pomona, Cal Poly San Luis Obispo and the University of Nevada, Reno.

The current NNCC team has one member returning from last year, Jerry Jones, the club president from Elko, who will compete in the bareback bronc and bull riding events.

Freshman team members include: Dennis Acorda of Winnemucca, who will compete in team roping; Andrea Baer, Hazen, Nevada, team and breakaway roping; Jamie DeBraga, Fallon, 1977 Nevada High School goat tying champion, who will compete in goat tying and breakaway roping; Mike Jones, Elko, bareback bronc and bull riding; Mark Laughlin, Elko, bull riding; Alkie Mariluch, Elko, bareback bronc and bull riding; Kenny Merkley, Jiggs, team roping and bareback bronc riding.

The NNCC team will compete in 12 rodeos this year, aiming at improving its sixth place finish in the region last year.

Metric class at NNCC 1-18-78

"Introduction to the Metric System," a one-credit class, will be offered Monday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m. at Northern Nevada Community College. Individuals may enroll through Friday for the eight-week class.

Students will learn to estimate quantities in various metric units and then check by actual measurement. Physical quantities involved in the class include length, area, volume, weight, speed, temperature, energy and power.

Mark Melrose, NNCC mathematics instructor, said that only basic arithmetic skills are needed by those who enroll. Conversions are minimized, and students will learn to "think metric" by using key references to approximate quantities.

1-19-78 Foreign Policy Class at NNCC

Northern Nevada Community College is now offering an evening course, Political Science 206, "Foreign Policy and International Politics", on Thursdays from 7 to 9:45 p.m.

The course will deal with American foreign relations with the continent of Asia, with special emphasis on Indo-China.

Paul S. Hanna will be the instructor for the course and will present a political and military history of the area from the period of the French involvement following World War II

SIGN LANGUAGE

American Sign Language (Ameslan) will be offered for the first time at NNCC this spring. The class, conducted by Jan Christensen, is set for Thursday evenings.

"Ameslan" is among the most popular sign systems in use in the United States, according to the instructor.

The class will concentrate on 375 different signs plus finger spelling and counting. Knowledge of these signs will enable an individual to converse with almost any deaf person or anybody who knows the sign language.

Christensen pointed out that "Ameslan" used just a few key words to convey meanings. Facial expressions, he claimed, are just as important as the signs themselves in communication.

"Ameslan", Christensen concluded, is the 'real' sign language for the deaf."

Pioneer Arts and Crafts 1-18-78 slates 22 classes at NNCC

Twenty-two classes are being offered in the Pioneer Arts and Crafts Program at the college, reports Sarah Campsey, project director.

"The focus of this program is on developing the total person. Educators would say we are developing the cognitive, psychomotor and affective domain of the student. Artists would say we were practicing creative skills because students are taught to build their own looms, make their own leather tools and create their own designs.

"Humanists would say we are offering expression of the soul of man through the musical interest classes, as well as the other courses. 4-H'ers would say hands, heart, head and health. They are all speaking about the total person," she said.

Entering its fourth year, this program offers a curriculum of skills shared by traditional and revivalist crafts people from the Northeastern Nevada area. Classes offering community service credit will apply toward the General Studies Degree and must be registered for this week. Registration at the first class period is possible but no credit is available.

Courses offered for credit are stained glass, machine embroidery, leathercraft, quilting, china painting, china flowers, lace making, weaving, banjo playing, silversmithing, tatting, tole painting, knitting and crochet, English smocking, and innovative needlepoint.

Short courses for non-credit will include doll lamps, banjo playing, bread dough art, pie making, yeast breads, hex signs, art with found objects and crafts in china. An exhibit of the semester's work will be held at the Northeastern Nevada Museum in May.

Many of the classes are directed toward learning a craft that will not require large investments in tools. One instance of this can be found in the leathercraft class where Charles Hamilton will teach his students to make their own leather carving and stamping tools. Information about these courses may be obtained by calling Sarah Campsey at NNCC 738-8493, ext. 29. This project is partially funded by Nevada State Council on the Arts, National Endowment for the Arts and Northern Nevada Community College. (Submitted)

NNCC Bronc Riders Place 1-19-78

Two Northern Nevada Community College bareback bronc riders placed in competition at a rodeo sponsored by Imperial Valley College in Brawley, Calif., this past weekend. NNCC Rodeo Club president Jerry Jones placed second and picked up 72 points toward individual and team standings, after receiving a score of 62 for his ride in the one go-around event.

Freshman rider Mike Jones split a 4th place standing and received 35 points. The double placing allowed the NNCC team to accumulate 107 points in team standings. NNCC's other two bareback riders, Alkie Mariluch and Kenny Merkley, rode their stock, but did not score high enough to place in the top six positions. Mark Laughlin, the lone NNCC bull rider at Brawley, failed to complete his ride.

This weekend, Jan. 21 and 22, the NNCC team will travel to Yuma, Ariz., to compete at Western Arizona College.

Six team members will make the trip. Andrea Baer will compete in the breakaway roping; Jerry Jones, Mike Jones, and Laughlin will enter the bull riding event; and in the bareback bronc riding there will be four entries — Jerry Jones, Mike Jones, Mariluch and Merkley.

Needlepoint class offered ^{Feb. 15, 78}

A new class, Needlepoint by Number, offers an innovative approach to this artform. The 10-week course will begin Feb. 22 with a morning class from 9-12 a.m. and an evening class from 7-10 p.m. at Northern Nevada Community College.

Both beginning and advanced students will benefit by the new techniques and stitches offered. Each course will be divided into three sections with the first devoted to quilt patterns, the second to needlepoint plaids, and the third to a new media, Trianglepoint.

The quilt or folk art patterns will be utilized in 12-inch pillows based on the number system. Needlepoint plaids will be taught by an unusual method...by birthdate, social security number or telephone number with every student producing a different design. Plaids done in needlepoint assume a texture of woven wool fabric.

If time allows, there will be a lesson devoted to diagonal plaids. Trianglepoint is a quick easy method using triangles to develop unusual designs. There will also be information given on Norwegian needlepoint.

Beginners will learn some of the basics of needlepoint with advanced students learning more technical aspects.

The class will be taught by Kay Thompson. (Submitted)

BATTLE MOUNTAIN — A Wednesday night panel discussion on possible solutions to juvenile problems concluded a series of three meetings funded by a $3,000 grant received by Battle Mountain High School from the Nevada Humanities Commission.

The programs were developed under the direction of high school teacher Jeff Nafie, and have utilized the expertise of a number of individuals who work with young adults.

In the first meeting, held Feb. 16, Karen Martin, sociology instructor at Northern Nevada Community College, opened the series with an overview of adolescent psychology.

Ms. Martin explained the manner in which an adolescent fits into the whole of society. She described the transition from childhood to adulthood as stressful, but possibly no more difficult than turning 40.

KAREN MARTIN

May 3, 78
Ms. Martin outlined the physical, emotional and social changes that take place during adolescence. She stated that, in our society, we do not have a specific point at which we arrive at adulthood. "Adolescents have to discover it for themselves, and they seem to be discovering it earlier and earlier," she said.

According to Ms. Martin, children are being exposed to sex education too late. She said that children need accurate information about sex early in life in order to deal with the changing sexual feelings and increasing male-female relationships that follow the onset of puberty.

Ms. Martin named the development of good self-esteem as one of the most important tasks an adolescent faces. She stated that adolescents who have good self-esteem suffer fewer problems than those with low self-esteem.

Ms. Martin stated that young people with good self-esteem were found to have parents who themselves have good self-esteem. She added that studies show that those parents tend to be strict, demanding, consistent with rules, fair in their judgments, and include their children in the process of setting limits.

Following Ms. Martin's presentation, Dorothy North, director of the Northern Nevada Alcohol and Drug Abuse Program, spoke on the subject of "Youth and Alcohol."

First intercollegiate rodeo planned for Elko

Northern Nevada Community College will host an intercollegiate rodeo on May 26 and 27, according to Stan Aiazzi, NNCC administrative assistant.

Rodeo teams from colleges in Arizona, California, and Nevada will be competing for national championship points during the two days of events. More than 100 contestants are expected.

Site for this first intercollegiate rodeo in Elko will be the county fairgrounds. Two performances are scheduled - the first beginning at 7 p.m. May 26 and the second for the afternoon of May 27.

During recent years the NNCC rodeo team has competed in events at the various colleges to be participating. "We're very happy to be able to bring intercollegiate rodeo to NNCC," said Aiazzi. "This is really exciting, and we want everybody in Elko to enjoy the performances."

The NNCC rodeo will be a kind of semi-finals event. It is the last scheduled West Coast rodeo before the finals, the National Intercollegiate Finals to be held in Bozeman, Mont. in July. The events are sanctioned by the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association.

"Competition will be fierce, as only the top two college teams and individuals from each of ten regions in the United States will be eligible to compete for world championship titles in Bozeman," Aiazzi said. "Our NNCC rodeo thus takes on much importance as a kind of elimination event."

Aiazzi, who has sponsored the NNCC team for several years, noted that the West Coast region has always produced many champion cowboys and cowgirls, and several award winners will be in action in Elko in May. "Naturally, the best performers will be here," he said.

NNCC rodeo team members will be selling tickets soon in a door-to-door campaign in an effort to cover costs of the event.

NNCC team members and the events they participate in are:

- Jerry Jones: Bareback riding and bull riding
- Alkie Mariluch: Bareback riding and team roping
- Andrea Baer: Team roping and breakaway roping
- Mike Jones: Bareback riding and bull riding
- Dennis Acorda: Team roping
- Kenny Merkley: Bareback riding and team roping
- Jamie DeBraga: Breakaway roping and goat tying

Area high school seniors to tour NNCC on April 4

High school seniors of the five-county area served by Northern Nevada Community College, Elko, will be guests of the college April 4.

The "Senior Day" will also mark the 10th anniversary of higher education in Northeastern Nevada, according to Dr. William Berg, President of NNCC.

A schedule of activities, keynoting college entrance and educational expenses, is being planned by Campus Women, in conjunction with the faculty. Campus Women is an auxiliary of female faculty and staff members, as well as wives of faculty members.

Approximately 400 students will tour the college, meet with faculty, and receive guidance in selecting college curriculum - whether at NNCC or another college of their choice - as well as financial aids available.

They will be guests of the Campus Women for a barbeque luncheon on campus, and will receive an excused absence from school to participate in the event. Seniors from neighboring schools will be bussed to the college.

Participating, will be students from Elko, Carlin, Wells, Owyhee, Ely, Winnemucca, Battle Mountain, Eureka, McDermitt, and Lund high schools.

RUNNING HAS BECOME so popular that Northern Nevada Community College offers a class in "jogging." Here members of the class start out during one of the class periods which are held on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at noon. The college is also sponsoring a "jog-a-thon" to be run over a 3-mile course on Sunday, April 9.

JOGGING HAS TAKEN hold in Elko as many residents can be seen at all hours of the day running up and down streets and on the various athletic fields in town. Here Bill Davies (left) and Mark Melrose are shown running in preparation for the first annual "Jog-a-thon" sponsored by Northern Nevada Community College to be held here Sunday, April 9.

275 Students In Local College

By BARBARA STORMS

Some 275 students are enrolled for spring semester at Northern Nevada Community College in Winnemucca and 21 more are studying in the adult basic education program, according to Coordinator Lois Craver. About 50 students are enrolled at the Battle Mountain branch.

Since the school was established in the late 60s as part of the Community College Division of the University of Nevada System, five students have earned two-year associate degrees and four more are expected to be graduated at the end of the semester. In Battle Mountain, one degree has been awarded and six more are anticipated, according to Coordinator Walter Van Horne.

The 38 courses at Winnemucca and 11 at Battle Mountain range from Basic Ground School for Pilots to Beginning Sewing to Composition and Rhetoric — a program as varied as the needs and interests of the students.

And it is to just that kind of variety that the NNCC has aimed its program.

The chief function of the NNCC is to provide occupational programs teaching skills for employment and to offer the first two years of a four-year bachelor degree program but there are plenty of opportunities for anybody who simply wants to upgrade his skills or increase his knowledge in a wide variety of areas.

It is this last group that accounts for the huge popularity of courses like woodworking, welding, jewelry making and stitchery, classes which regularly enroll as many as 40 students a semester.

Ms. Craver said the school tries to offer whatever the community wants but a lot depends upon the availability of space and instructors.

"We always need instructors, especially in the hobbies and crafts," she said. There is always a demand for people to teach courses like agriculture, drama, physical education, tennis, music and dance. It is not necessary to have a degree to teach the crafts, Ms. Craver emphasized. "You just have to know your subject."

Both Winnemucca and Battle Mountain branches draw instructors from the community and especially from the high schools. "In the last two years we've only once had to import an instructor," Walter Van Horne said. That was Bill Post, who comes from Elko to teach the pilot ground school. Air instruction for aeronautics students has not been offered in recent years for lack of a teacher.

The college is open to anyone over the age of 18 whether or not he or she has finished high school. For those who have not, NNCC offers high school diploma equivalency preparation and an adult high school diploma program at the Winnemucca center's office in the basement of the post office at 4th and Melarkey. English as a second language instruction also is offered. Rae Edwards and Cathryn Smyers are coordinators.

A number of academic courses, offered as "Audio Visual" are also available.

quality instruction as you'd get in any classroom."

The self-paced courses are taped and available at the student's convenience. He listens to taped lectures, completes and mails in tests and assignments and, in most cases, receives scores and comments back from the instructor. The AVT makes it possible to offer courses such as medical terminology, psychology, U.S. History, Composition & Literature, Composition and Rhetoric and Typing without enrolling the minimum 10 students or tracking down a local instructor.

All courses are lower division credit courses and are offered at $13 a credit hour except for senior citizens 62 years of age or more who may enroll without charge.

Also geared to the varied needs of the students are the three two-year degree programs offered at NNCC.

The Associate Arts degree is primarily for students planning to transfer with junior-year standing to a four-year college for a bachelor's degree in liberal arts or sciences. The Associate in Applied Science is conferred upon students who have completed a course of study in such career fields as law enforcement, agriculture, electronics, farm and ranch management, or secretarial science. The Associate in General Studies is for students interested in general education with no particular occupational goals in mind.

The NNCC was founded in 1967 by a group of Elko citizens who organized Nevada's first community college. In 1969 after the late Howard Hughes donated $250,000 for advancement of the community college movement, the Nevada Legislature approved funding for community colleges and transferred the Elko school to the Board of Regents of the University of Nevada System. Accredited by the North West Association of School and Colleges since 1974, NNCC now has an enrollment of 1,300 students, more than a third of whom are in branches at Ely, Owyhee, Wells, McDermitt, Battle Mountain and Winnemucca.

Presently on the Winnemucca faculty are Ronald Trummell, Richard Legarza, Robert Cavikis, Stan Aiazzi, Sharon Angle, Teddi Swecker, Beverly Sullivan, Patsy Ross, Judy Rose, Ronald Clark, Stan Rorex, Joyce Oxborrow, Frank Oxborrow, William Stark, William Vickers, Irene Little, Charles Freed, James Connor, Irene Davis and Judy McLennan.

Instructors at Battle Mountain are Charles Quaipe, Joseph Mortenson, Larry Coy, Hy Forgeron and George Schwin.

Lace has become a very fashionable accessory to many of the spring outfits and has also become a very popular hobby for both younger and older women.

Supplies needed for the class are: a plastic shuttle, and also a ball of knit cro-sheen thread.

Sarah Campsey speaks on art in Houston

Ap. 1, 78

Sarah Campsey, instructor of art, education and director of Pioneer Arts and Crafts at Northern Nevada Community College, recently spoke at the National Association of Art Education in Houston, Texas. She accepted the invitation to speak with Ivan Cornia, Davis Art Supervisor, Charles Stubbs, Utah State Fine Arts Specialist and Dr. Nathan B. Winters, University of Utah, Professor of Art Education, with whom she worked during the past year as a graduate student. Winters, Cornia and Stubbs are the authors of the newly released book, "Art is Elementary, Teaching Visual Thinking Through Art Concepts".

From her speech, "Art is Thought Made Visible," Mrs. Campsey related, "When art is made an integral part of the curriculum, the entire school program is enriched. Art is an area where students have a tremendous variety of ways to express (or press-out) much of the knowledge they have gained in other subjects. There is a method of relating weaving warp measurement to match, weaving patterns to social studies, weaving designs to developing visual imagery which has a direct correlation to spelling. These subject matter concepts "honeycomb" onto one another to build the strongest possible structure of knowledge. I followed my "honeycomb" concept with an audio-slide presentation that included many of Elko's school children in the stick loom weaving program carried out in the Elko schools three years ago. The participants in this section were then given their own set of stick looms to learn this craft themselves, I love telling people about what we're doing in our Pioneer Arts and Crafts program. We have developed a unique program at NNCC." Of the 360 speakers and seminar group leaders at the conference, Mrs. Campsey was one of four representing community colleges.

James Michener, noted author, participated on a panel with David Rockefeller, Jr. in discussing Coming to Our Senses - The Rockefeller Report. According to Mrs. Campsey, Michener remarked that he sees America as schizophrenic in its growing ability to appreciate and produce its own art and yet schools are cutting valuable art programs.

Jamake Highwater, noted author, lecturer and American Indian scholar, spoke of "Song from the Earth: American Indian Painting." He pointed out the importance of understanding the Native Americans feeling that art is life; that is not an isolated subject to be taught, but in everything there is art.

Other keynote speakers included Elliot Eisner, Edmund Burke Feldman, Jacques Barzun, Samella S Lewis, all authors and educators at universities across the country.

In the Research in Art Education seminars that were conducted the major concern was the changing direction of curriculum. Mrs. Campsey reports, "The art educators who teaches for "fun projects" in their classes are out-dated. Interdisciplinary sequential concepts have been established. The arts are now based on developing cognitive, psychomatic and affective learning." Dr. Howard Rosenberg, University of Nevada, Reno, noted in his talk "Film: The Only Art of the 20th Century" that "Art was once taught as something that makes you feel good. We now recognize it is important because it makes you feel."

A special event of the six-day convention was a private viewing of the important exhibition of 124 oils and watercolors by Paul Cezanne at the Museum of Fine Arts.

Some 2,000 men and women came from each of the 50 states, Australia and Canada. They came from universities, art institutes, state art agencies, state education offices, counseling and art therapy centers, publishing and art materials companies to upgrade their skills in teaching the arts.

'The Odd Couple' set for April 13-15 shows

By Judith A. Leasure

The Northern Nevada Little Theater will be presenting Neil Simon's play, "The Odd Couple", on April 13, 14, and 15 at the Northern Nevada Community College Library.

The performances will begin at 7:30 each evening.

Tickets will be available at the door at a cost of $2 for adults and $1 for children.

"The Odd Couple", which had a very long and successful run on Broadway, is a comedy about two divorced men, the fastidiously neat and particular Felix Unger and the fundamentally sloppy, poker playing Oscar Madison, who decide to share an apartment. The extreme differences in their personalities lead to funny situations which are sure to leave audiences gasping for air.

Appearing as Oscar Madison is Jim Holdren. He appeared before Elko audiences in the little theater production of "White House". When he is not performing on stage, Holdren is a licensed practical nurse at Elko General Hospital and enjoys archery and other sports.

Social studies teacher Chuck Briggs plays the part of Felix Unger. Briggs is also no stranger to the Elko stage, having performed in "White House" and "Black Comedy." Other activities which keep Chuck busy are the Ecology Club at the high school, the Nevada National Guard, and serving as president of the Cancer Society for Elko County.

Also appearing in the play are Jeff Cooper, Mike Casey, Bill Welch, Bill Lehmann, Edie Atwell, and Pami Briggs.

"The Odd Couple" is being directed by Vicki Rossolo, who has directed many of the little theater's previous productions including "Come Blow Your Horn", "Black Comedy", and "White House." She has taught oral interpretation and speech at NNCC, and as a student at Washington State University took second place in an oral interpretation contest with participants from five western states.

FELIX UNGER, played by Chuck Briggs, and his friends, played by Edie Atwell and Pami Briggs, shed tears over Felix' misfortunes in "The Odd Couple" to be presented by the Northern Nevada Little Theater at 7:30 p.m. on April 13, 14, and 15, at the NNCC library (Related story on front page). NNCC students in 'Who's Who'

Three Northern Nevada Community College students have been selected for "Who's Who Among Students in American Junior Colleges", a national publication honoring outstanding students in two-year post-secondary institutions.

The students are Ron Marrujo, Kathy Overbey, and Carol Turney. They were nominated by the NNCC faculty and later selected by the national organization. They were chosen for scholarship, participation and leadership in college activities, or potential for future achievement.

Part of the largest group ever to be selected at NNCC, all three are nearing graduation and most plan to continue their studies at universities.

Carol Turney, a commuter from North Fork, is a candidate for the associate in arts degree. In 1976, Turney completed the college's one-year vocational nursing program. However, she became excited about learning in the program's general education courses and decided to continue for a two-year degree. She will complete it this spring and eventually transfer, probably to the University of Utah, to study mental health.

Three of Turney's children also attend NNCC. "I'm surprised at being picked for "Who's Who," she said. One of an ever-increasing number of mature adults now going to college, she did not hide her pleasure. "I've enjoyed being here. My association with other students and the instructors has been uplifting. A lot of people my age in Elko are missing out on a wonderful opportunity by not being here. It gives you a real sense of value."

Kathy Overbey drives daily from Lamolle along with her mother, also an NNCC student. She has been pursuing a liberal arts and sciences curriculum and plans to transfer to a four-year institution where she will major in forestry or wildlife biology.

She hopes to spend the upcoming summer working for the Flathead National Forest.

"The science instruction at NNCC is excellent, and the agriculture classes are just as good," Overbey said.

Ron Marrujo, who came to NNCC from Ely, is one of two males selected for "Who's Who." Marrujo, a talented basketball player, is a serious-minded student who, by all faculty accounts, is also outstanding academically. He plans to become a minister and will enter a theological seminary after graduation.

NCTE also honors teachers and schools that have participated in the training of these young men and women. Seven thousand students have been nominated for NCTE Awards in 1978. Results of the contest are announced in October of each year.

Students are nominated for Achievement Awards in Writing by their high school English departments and are chosen for recognition by state judging committees. (Each nominee submits an impromptu theme and a sample of his or her best writing to be judged.) The regional judging committees are composed of both high school and college teachers of English who work under the direction of state coordinators.

The National Council of Teachers of English is made up of more than 100,000 individual teachers and institutional members at all levels of instruction, from elementary school through graduate college. Craig Michler, an instructor in Administration of Justice at Northern Nevada Community College (NNCC), will be the moderator for the panel, which is scheduled for Jan. 25 from 7 to 10 p.m. in the White Pine County Library.

The discussion group is being held in conjunction with a 15-week "Crime and Justice in America" newspaper course that is currently being carried by the Daily TIMES. Tentative panel members include Seventh District Judge Merlyn Hoyt, White Pine District Attorney Rupert Schneider, WPHS Assistant Principal Florindo Mariani, Office Director Richard Baldo of the Ely Mental Health Center, Nevada State Senator Richard Bryan (an unannounced candidate for Nevada Attorney General) and Michler.

Subject matter for the discussion will include victimless crime, white collar crime, organized crime, plea bargaining and public trust, and sentencing and corrections. The intent is to make the discussion applicable to happenings in Nevada and White Pine County.

The public is invited and audience participation will be encouraged during the discussion.

WELLS HIGH SCHOOL students Jody Sestanovich, Tammy Nugent, Mary Jaynes and Kirsten Sorensen attended an open house Tuesday celebrating the 10th anniversary of Northern Nevada Community College in Elko. NNCC class for parents resumes next Monday night

So you think he's uncontrollable but everyone enjoys him? Or you find him amusing but everyone thinks he's out of control? Whether your child has a behavioral problem or not, every parent has something to gain from attending next week's program on parenting and community services.

The second in a series of parenting programs will be at 7 p.m. next Monday, in room 18 LRC at Northern Nevada Community College. Presenting the forum on behavioral management will be Aghdas Pezeshki of Utah State University, Logan; Jim Starr, director, Elko Community Mental Health Clinic; and Ray Kendall, psychiatric social worker.

Included in the program will be a film on managing children's behavior. Both adolescents and younger children will be discussed. Evie Michler, parenting program coordinator, suggests parents planning to attend bring questions concerning management of their child's behavior.

At the first program, those attending expressed a need for information concerning day care centers and babysitting available in the area. Sandra Brennecke of the state welfare department stated her office may fill that need. Persons desiring a sitter on a long term basis or those wishing to babysit may contact the state welfare personnel at 738-7211.

Also discussed at the first program was the fact that a license is required if a babysitter is caring for five or more pre-school children (including her own.) However, licensing is not a complicated process nor does it necessarily involve special facilities. For additional information contact the State of Nevada Bureau of Health Facilities, Carson City.

Marilee Harper, Karen Martin, Kathy Garamendi, Reverend George Evans and Sharon Whipple participated in the program and all expressed an interest in answering any questions parents may have.

Babysitting at no charge will be available if arrangements are made in advance with Mrs. Michler at 738-3472 before 9 a.m. Monday. (Submitted)

Letters to the Editor

Editor:

We at Northern Nevada Community College would like to thank all those who participated in and helped with the NNCC-sponsored jog-a-thon. The run was a tremendous success and we are already talking about a run in October, with more divisions for the ladies, as well as other categories. Maybe we could get a delegation to represent Elko at the Nevada State Journal Jog in Reno later in October for 5 miles. Think about that, joggers.

We would especially like to thank Len Holdren of the Elko Daily Free Press for his excellent coverage and lead-up articles to the run. Also, to Alan Blach of Blach-Glenn Distributing for his refreshments and finish line banner. Thanks also

EDITOR'S NOTE The opinions expressed in the letters used by the Elko Daily Free Press do not necessarily express the opinion of this newspaper. We hope that the "Letter Box" will always be considered a place for the exchange of ideas and give our readers an opportunity to express themselves publicly upon problems of all kinds.

to Dave Emerson and his Search and Rescue Unit which manned the corners of the route for us.

The jog-a-thon earned $110, to be used toward a general scholarship fund established by the college.

Georgeanna Smith named to head nursing program

AP 27, 78

Georgeanna Smith has been appointed nursing programs coordinator at Northern Nevada Community College, Dr. William Berg, NNCC president, said today.

"Mrs. Smith has begun her duties at the college. She will be preparing the curriculum for the newly created two-year registered nursing degree," Berg said.

The new program will be limited to ten students and will get under way during the fall semester of 1978. The registered nursing training is an expansion of the licensed practical nursing program which has been in existence in Elko for about twenty years. The one-year LPN program came under the college in 1968.

Mrs. Smith recently resigned as director of nursing for Nevada Home Health. She had held the position since 1974. Mrs. Smith was formerly the head nurse, relief supervisor, and in-service director at Elko General Hospital.

"Mrs. Smith has excellent credentials and a solid background in nursing. She is well-qualified to direct the two-year degree in nursing," Berg added. A 1966 graduate of the Elko School of Practical Nursing, Mrs. Smith completed an Associate degree in nursing at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, in 1970. She completed a B.S. degree in nursing at Montana State University in 1972 and an M.Ed. degree at the University of Nevada, Reno, in 1977.

Mrs. Smith has been a part-time NNCC instructor and has organized and conducted nurses aide and home health aide courses in several rural counties of Nevada.

In addition to general supervision of the existing LPN training and the RN program, the new coordinator will set admission guidelines for students, teach classes, counsel students, and assist part-time instructors with the development of courses.

A native of Twin Falls, Mrs. Smith is a member of the American Nurses Association, Nevada Nurses Association, Home Health Agencies of Nevada, Northern Nevada Directors of Nursing, and the NNCC Nursing Education Advisory Board.

The registered nursing program at NNCC has been a long-sought goal which dates from the early 1970s. The University of Nevada System Regents recently approved the local program after the go-ahead was finally given by the State Board of Nursing. Funding for the initial phase of the training has been provided by the board of trustees of the Elko General Hospital, and continuation will be contingent upon appropriations from the next legislature.

NNCC officials believe that the funding will be forthcoming, as several studies have shown a need for training registered nurses for Elko and rural areas.

More than 100 entries for Elko college rodeo

More than 100 entries assure two days of top-flight rodeo competition this weekend at the intercollegiate rodeo to be held at the Elko County Fairgrounds.

Events start at 7 p.m. Friday and at 1 p.m. on Saturday, according to Jerry Jones, president of the Rodeo Club of Northern Nevada Community College which is sponsoring the rodeo.

The rodeo is the only intercollegiate rodeo held in Nevada this year, and the first ever held in Elko.

Competitors are coming from all over California, Arizona and Nevada said Jones.

Events consist of bareback riding, bull riding, saddle bronc, calf roping, steer wrestling, team roping, breakaway roping, barrel racing and goat tying.

The rodeo is sanctioned by the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association and is the last such rodeo before the national finals in Bozeman, Mont.

Advance tickets are on sale from Rodeo Club and Future Farmers of America members.

After Saturday's events, a dance will be held at the National Guard Armory starting at 9 p.m. with music by Comstock Dry.

'Star Party' slated here tomorrow night

Tom Ross, astronomy instructor at Northern Nevada Community College, reported today an oft-postponed "star watching party" has been scheduled tomorrow evening.

Ross noted cloudy skies have forced postponement of the star-viewing project several times this spring, but commented he conferred today with weatherman George Bostic and determined the current forecast indicates the weather may finally be ready to cooperate with Elko County astronomers.

As a result, he announced the "star party" will be conducted beginning at about 8:30 p.m. tomorrow on North Fifth Street, near the monument erected to mark the site of the flood control dam immediately north of Elko.

If skies turn out to be clear, as forecast, Ross said he will set up the college's eight-inch telescope, and viewers will be able to see five planets — Venus, Jupiter, Mars, Saturn and Uranus — as well as a variety of stars and constellations.

A special attraction, he said, will be Comet Meier. Ross explained Rolf Meier, a 24-year-old electronics engineer, found his first comet and the first for his nation on April 27 from an observation point near Ottawa, Canada. Although this comet is intrinsically brighter than Halley's Comet, Ross commented, its relationship to Sun and Earth will prevent it from becoming a naked-eye object.

Ross added the public is invited to dress warmly for the "Elko County Star Party."

Room available for college cooking class

Space is still available, but pre-registration is required, for a gourmet cooking class at Northern Nevada Community College which will be held May 22 and May 30. The May 22 class will be held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and will cost $7.50. Demonstration will be given on dishes made with sprouts. The May 29 class will be held from 1 to 7 p.m. and costs $12. Preparation of an evening meal from coq au vin to crepes suzette will be given. Participants in the class will be able to dine on the food prepared, according to Gisele Berube-Moritis, the course instructor. Mrs. Berube-Moritis spent five years studying cooking in Spain and Portugal, and is currently employed as the cook at Breitenstein House. She will be leaving there in June to start a career as a travel guide. Pre-registration can be accomplished by calling the college or by mailing in a post card.

Tom Ross, astronomy instructor at Northern Nevada Community College, today issued a reminder on an Elko County Star Party slated ~~on~~ ^{if skies are clear} on North Fifth Street immediately north of Elko, at 8:30 this evening. The public is invited to gather near the monument which marks the site of a flood control dam just north of town to hear Ross point out various stars and planets visible in the sky. He advised those who attend to dress warmly.

College plans gourmet class

The class will be taught by Gisele Berube-Moritis. Registration can be handled by phoning the college or by sending in a post card.

The May 22 class will deal with dishes made with sprouts, including wheat bread, vegetable quiche and salads. Cost of the session is $7.50.

The May 30 class will deal with preparing an evening meal from coq au vin to crepes suzette. The cost of the session is $12.

Mrs. Berube-Moritis is a registered nurse with most of her work in nutrition.

Local comment invited by UN regents

James L. "Bucky" Buchanan, chairman of the board of regents for the University of Nevada System, announced time has been set aside during a meeting of that board Friday in Elko to hear local comments on the community college division.

Buchanan explained the annual meeting of the regents on the Northern Nevada Community College campus will be held Friday; and residents of this area have been invited to appear before the board to express "any constructive criticisms, comments or disappointments they may have with the community college."

He reported time for this discussion has been scheduled on the meeting agenda from 1:30 until 2:30 Friday afternoon. The regents will meet in the library at the Elko college.

Regents meet in Elko tomorrow

Regents of the University of Nevada will meet in Elko tomorrow, with the session slated to start at 10 a.m. in the library at Northern Nevada Community College.

Residents of the area have been invited by James L. "Bucky" Buchanan, chairman of the board, to participate in a discussion of the community college division of the university system which is scheduled from 1:30 to 2:30 tomorrow afternoon.

The agenda for the meeting includes a request from Bill Berg, president of the college campus in Elko, for an allocation of $42,696 in financial assistance for the local college. Chancellor Don Baepler has recommended approval of the request.

During the 1:30 p.m. discussion, topics will include a report on the community college division by Tadlock Associates, Inc. That report, which has been the subject of some controversy between the regents and members of the state legislature (including State Senator Norman Glaser of Halleck) makes a number of recommendations, including a suggestion that Nevada's higher education governing structure be patterned after Montana's.

An earlier draft of the "Tadlock Report" specifically recommended the creation of a separate state-level board for administering community colleges apart from the university system; but a revised report which accompanies the agenda for tomorrow's meeting does not contain that recommendation.

According to the revised report, the Montana system — which Tadlock recommends — is based on what is described as "local governance and control, within state guidelines."

Other agenda items include a proposal by Regent Chris Karamanos of Las Vegas, that the bylaws of the board be amended to render Buchanan eligible for a third term as chairman of the board. The present bylaws impose a limit of two consecutive two-year terms.

Action also is anticipated on the recommendations for salary increases for two University of Nevada Reno faculty members — Robert Gorrell and Harry Gianneschi — in an agenda item deferred from the board's April meeting. Regents postponed action on the salary requests for the two men after complaining that both had publicly criticized actions of the board of regents.

References to this situation by Buchanan during graduation ceremonies at the UNR campus prompted three rounds of booing by members of his audience.

Fund drive opens for college nurse program

Donations to establish a registered nursing program in Elko are now being accepted, according to Paul Sawyer, coordinator of the registered nursing fund raising committee.

Elko General Hospital and Northern Nevada Community College need to raise $15,000 to start the program and a funding drive has been initiated to acquire the necessary amount over the next two weeks, Sawyer said.

The program was started because of the critical shortage and unsuccessful effort to recruit registered nurses to Elko, Dorothy Gallagher, chairman of the hospital board said.

The registered nursing program will be a two-year program with students receiving practical experience at the hospital while taking classes which are transferable at the community college, Gallagher said. The students after completing the course and obtaining a registered nursing license can either begin working or transfer to a four-year school for further study.

Tax deductible donations should be mailed directly to the hospital and checks made payable to Elko General Hospital Registered Nursing Fund, Sawyer said.

He added because the program has been instituted to solve the shortage of registered nurses in the area the community is the benefactor of the program.

Roseann Carpenter and Nelda Glaser are also coordinators of the fund-raising committee.

COORDINATORS FOR THE committee seeking funds for the registered nursing program at Northern Nevada Community College are shown inspecting plans to the raise the necessary $15,000. The fate of the Elko Community College hangs in the balance this week as members of the board of trustees of the Elko county school district and members of the advisory board for the community college jockey for administrative control of the infant institution which only recently received a transfusion of financial blood which will not necessarily cure it ill but will give it another year of life.

Dog owners who would permit their pets to roam at large within the city were very much in the minority as interested citizens appeared at the regular meeting of the board of city supervisors Tuesday night to express their views on the proposed new city "leash law" ordinance which would require all pets in the public streets to be controlled by a leash.

Miss Davis C. McDaniel, Elko county librarian since January of 1966, has resigned that position to enter the University of Colorado, Boulder, for further graduate study.

Cooking class at NNCC

Cooking, that ever-necessary occupation that often confines women to the kitchen and the stove, is no longer drudgery. Not if you consider the classes being given at the Northern Nevada Community College by Giselle Berube-Moritis.

She teaches growing and cooking sprouts and the new low-calorie French Minceur Cuisine. For those enrolled in her classes, Giselle has opened up a whole new world between the refrigerator and the stove.

Her source is "The Cuisine of Slimness; Michel Guerard's Cuisine Minceur," a book which is not yet on the Bookmobile, but one that will be soon. And one that will give the popular "Farm Journal" cookbooks some brisk competition.

The good cook who has avoided opening up a French cookbook for fear of gaining pounds just in the looking can now enjoy non-fattening French recipes and the great art of cooking.

Casey Fagoaga, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nicolas Fagoaga of Elko, left from Salt Lake City, Utah, Sunday morning for Lesaca, Spain, where she will spend the summer visiting relatives.

Dolly Thompson of Elko recently received her private pilot's license at El Aera. Her instructor was Mike Rios.

Bridge club plans benefit

The Elko Bridge Club is sponsoring a benefit game at 7:30 p.m. next Tuesday to raise money for the Registered Nursing program at Northern Nevada Community College.

The game will be played at the college and the donation fee will be $2 per player.

Refreshments and prizes are being furnished by local club members and Reed Braithwaite, spokesman for the club, said that Bernice Gregory has put up two paintings as special prizes for the night.

Braithwaite said, "this is a worthwhile project and I urge everyone who has played any type of bridge to take part and help get this program moving. Get a partner and come out and play, it will be a very enjoyable evening."

Regents Regret

Regents of the University of Nevada have come a full circle in their agony of indecision concerning the community college system.

Last year, the regents voted to abolish the presidency of the system and decentralize the administration. But at the regents meeting in Las Vegas last week, they approved a proposal by Dr. Fred Anderson to include funding for the position of a top administrator for the community college system in the biennium budget.

The regents have not specified the duties of the proposed position or whether it would indeed be that of a president. But the intention to appoint an administrative head of some kind is clear.

There is no doubt that the regents have made a mess of their policies concerning the community college leadership.

It all began last year when they faced a conflict. The system's administrator, Dr. Charles Donnelly, was amassing a following. There was little doubt that Donnelly believed the community college system should be removed from the paternal arm of the University of Nevada regents and function with its own board of regents.

Donnelly built the system from its very beginnings, to the point at which it had an enrollment of about 16,000 students. He was popular. And although there was some dispute about his capabilities, there was little on the record to justify demoting him.

He had, quite simply, built the system. The regents apparently believed, however, that by axing Donnelly, who was the one person in the state with the political and administrative clout to lead a separate system, they would forestall any moves in the future to remove the community college system from their jurisdiction.

It should be emphasized that an autonomous community college system would be a fierce threat to the University of Nevada. It would compete with the university system for funding before the Legislature. And a large number of legislators seem disposed, by background and philosophy, toward the grassroots, practical education which the community college system offers.

It would not be surprising if many regents now see that they made a disastrous mistake in letting Donnelly go. Donnelly, at least, was under their thumbs. And while he was an advocate of the system and served as its leader, he was still answerable to the regents, and it is unlikely that he would have openly advocated autonomy.

But once Donnelly was gone and the system left without an advocate, all the resentments and suspicions that the system was not getting a fair break came to a boil. These were precisely the emotions which Donnelly had managed to sooth.

The platforms of both the Democrat and Republican parties contained resolutions that the community college system be separated from the University of Nevada.

It is extremely unlikely that such consensus would have been achieved without the controversy and publicity generated by Donnelly's departure.

This has not been alleviated by a report by a California consulting firm — the Tadlock report — which contains a recommendation that the community college system be separated from the university, and notes that the regents appear biased in favor of the University of Nevada.

All this considered, it is not at all surprising that the regents are backpedaling furiously and are considering plans to give the community college system its own leadership.

It may be too late. Many legislators, particularly those from the rural counties, are already preparing to strip the community college from the university system. They believe the community college is being pushed into the background, and they may have a point. Mere administrative maneuvers by the regents may not be enough to assuage the resentment of these legislators or to dissuade some of the more vehement advocates of separation — particularly state Sen. Norm Glaser — to keep the present system intact.

And it's a shame. We are not at all certain that the community college should be separated at this time. It would be expensive. It would require a duplication of administrators and facilities. And it would create a competition for funding which might work against the university.

The regents, however, have at least learned that the community college system needs a strong advocate within the system and that to deprive it of one, as they did by demoting Donnelly, ultimately harms not only the community college system but their own ability to deal with the political forces which support it.
